PREFACE

In the preparation and compilation of this work, I have endeavored to give all information obtainable in connection with each of the main families, whose lines appear, confining myself as nearly as possible to a statement of facts, as the data have come to me.

Besides the genealogical matter the book contains, there is also included copies of deeds, wills, Revolutionary, and other war records, established eligibility for many of the patriotic societies, letters, marriage records, etc.

There are doubtless errors of omission, and some incorrect statements, for which I am truly sorry, but many years of toil and tedious research, and laborious compilation have gone to make it what it is, and I do not feel that this condition could be changed, and all mistakes rectified, if another decade of time and labor were expended. So with this full knowledge, I am writing the finale of nearly thirty years of unceasing study and work.

Lord Macauley has said, "A people which take no pride in the noble achievements of remote ancestors will never achieve anything worthy to be remembered with pride by remote descendants."

The importance of genealogical research to posterity can hardly be over-estimated, and it is of no less importance to the welfare of the nation. When an individual has knowledge of his ancestry, he becomes conscious of his place in the world and begins to realize that he is the sum total of all, that for ages has gone before.

With this in mind, and to help preserve the records of some of our ancestors, whose history has been all but lost, I am sending out this volume, trusting that it will inspire, respect for, and a desire to emulate the virtues of worthy forebears, and that it will help to keep warm in the hearts of their descendants a love and veneration, for a people who were patriots in every sense of the word. Because they were a reticent people much of their history has never been written, and it is well that some recognition of their service and loyalty to their country be recorded, for with the lapse of time, and destroyed family and county records, incomplete and uncared for, it will be well nigh impossible to rescue these facts from oblivion. Many times notes have been contributed lacking name of author and volume; novices in genealogical research rarely realize the importance of thus making their notes authentic.

This volume makes no claim to completeness—there are innumerable descendants of the families included that do not appear, although great effort was made to locate interested parties, and hundreds of letters written in the preparation and compilation of the book, it has been impossible to reach only a few, comparatively speaking, and many of those either did not respond at all, or were unable to help in any way with the records, or to give any light on their own lines. It is a source of deep regret that every descendant is not represented herein, but the compiler has done the best she could, with the data received.

The preparation of this book has led the author into highways, and byways. It has been the means of bringing into existence, the acquaintance of some most interesting people and worth while friends. In many instances it has awakened and renewed the love and interest of relatives, long lost sight of. It has made the bond of kinship doubly, trebly dear. It has brought about the assistance of unknown friends, who take a general interest in genealogy, so many in fact, that it will be impossible to mention them by name.

Relying upon the leniency and magnanimity of all who are interested in research of this kind, and the preservation of family records, I am bequeathing this volume to the numerous descendants of the families herein recorded. Trusting that the original information heretofore unpublished, will be compensation in a measure for anything else it lacks.

The Author.

"If the God of the universe inspired Matthew and Luke to record the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the one for forty-two generations, and the other all the way back to Adam, who are we to say that the records of the family pedigree is worthless."

MARKS

Marks is a name admitting of few variations, and those probably due to the peculiarities of that period of our history when every man spelled according to his own inclination. However, we find the name written as Marks, Marx, Marche, Markes, March, etc. In England it is a name common in many localities, especially in Suffolk shire, and is one of the old English names which strangely enough is at present more prolific and illustrious in this country than in England. The Marks in early days were noted for their wealth, and have been landed proprietors since early times. The family is noted for its intelligence and influence, their chief characteristics are well balanced minds and sound judgment. They are big hearted, public-spirited citizens, upright, and even unto the present generation they are honest, not only in business, but in all their dealings with their fellowman . It is seldom you find one that is not bent to an honest purpose, most of them are of deep convictions, and determined in maintaining their opinions.

Without interesting traditions, family histories would be prosaic reading. How many valuable records would be unearthed, if we could only follow the persistent traditions that crop up in every family to their source. The Hastings-Marks line fairly teems with them, dating from the days in old England to the settlement of the family in the Colony of Virginia, and romance abounds. Most of these traditions center around the marriage of John (Marx) Marks, of Suffolk, England and Elizabeth Hastings said to have been Lady Elizabeth Hastings of the Royal House of that name. daughter of an English Earl, whose name was Hastings, the reigning Earl, 6th or 7th of Huntingdon. The given name Hastings appears with Marks, as sirname from that period of 1680-5 to the present time. It is said also that John Marx was a Jew, and eloped with Lady Hastings against the wishes of her family, the opposition being so great that he brought his wife to America, settling in Virginia, at Charlottesville, in Albemarle County. They changed their name from Marx to Marks, gave their children Christian names, and reared them in the Christian faith. The latter form of spelling has been handed down in this branch of the family. The tradition of the Jew exists only in some branches of the family, some do not accept it in any version, and others have never even heard of it. Some are of the opinion, or rather a tradition has been handed down to them that John Marx was a barrister, or counselor at law, and was not considered the social or political mate for the high born daughter of the house of Hastings, which besides being royalty itself, boasted of many distinguished members; at any rate this couple left their native land and all their people, and sought a home in this more democratic nation. They brought with them nothing that would bind them to the past, not even records. The tradition of Jewish origin has not only been understood in the compiler's branch of the family, but has been accepted as a fact. Mrs. Foster who has given the subject much time and thought writes, "We have the foregoing Jewish tradition that was accepted by my grandmother in Georgia, who got it from her uncles after they came West, thence to New Orleans, she in turn became the sole authority for us of the younger generation."

The pros and cons of the Jewish theory are about evenly divided, and as it seems impossible to verify either version we will waste no time in trying to force an acceptance of one or the other. There is much that could probably be learned about the Marks and Hastings alliance, but so far no proof of this connection has been forthcoming. Research has not been of very much avail, it remains for some member of the family to make personal investigation of the families in England. The Hastings' family records should reveal the marriage of Elizabeth, or Anne Hastings, into the Marx (Marks) family. The other part of the tradition says that she was disinherited by her people for her mesalliance, and that her name was expunged from their records. If that is true, they cleared the records so thoroughly that it has been impossible to make a satisfactory research along either line. So we will begin our record with *John Marks and his wife Elizabeth Hastings, of England.

Marks men were of extraordinary ability. They had money from the first, and increased their fortunes until the Civil War. They were high spirited and honorable, never office seekers, nor politicians. There was said to be a family connection with the Countess of Huntingdon, Lady Selina Hastings, who died 1791 (See Heroines of Early Methodism). She was the daughter of Earl of Ferrers (Washington Shirley) and said to have been the granddaughter of Lawrence Washington, of Garsden, Wilshire, England.

From The Outlook, 1905-7; we take the following editorial, "Recent election in England returned to Parliament a certain man named Marks, of Kent, he controlled tremendous financial forces, being a member of the ancient Marks family, of Kent, Hebrews, who have held England's purse strings from early days."

The Hastings family held the ancient fort———? Castle———? when the battle of Hastings was fought, which looks down upon nearby Kent. This accords with the tradition, that they were always rich, the older members of the family remember their cousins, Charles and Eli Hastings, who visited them in Georgia, but nothing else is known about them. The Hastings family were clearly much interested in Georgia. At the period when our people were settling there. Lady Selina was trustee of all Methodist property in Georgia, which had been controlled by Whitefield, her sometime Chaplain in England. It is not at all improbable that James Marks, of Virginia and Georgia, knew personally the Hastings relatives, either visiting or locating in America.

Burke's General Armory, 1844, gives the following Coats of Arms for the English Marks family.

JOHN MARKS AND WIFE ELIZABETH HASTINGS, OF ENGLAND

John Marx (Marks) of Suffolk County, England, married Elizabeth Hastings, also of England, about 1680-5; this date is tentative, and may not be correct, but is given here as a working basis. It is said they came to America to cast their lot, and settled near Charlottesville, Virginia. It is supposed to have been at this time

An English General, he served in American Revolution, and took part in many prominent battles. He was the son of a daughter, and succeeded to the Hastings lands and titles, his grandmother, Countess Selina, had several daughters, she was Selina Shirley, b. near Ashby de la Zouche, 8, 24, 1709; d. London, 6, 17, 1791; became Countess of Huntingdon, and in later life was a religious leader, noted as the founder of Chapels, and as the leader of the sect of the Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, or Huntingdonians, a denomination of Colonistic Methodists in England and Wales, adherents of George Whitefield, after their separation from the Wesleys. She was the daughter of the 2nd Earl of Ferrers, an Englishman.

Family legend says that while Francis Rawdon was in this country he met in personal combat, Captain John Marks, a brother of James, and tried to kill him, because of some family fued in England. that the name was changed from Marx to Marks, which latter form has been handed down through the generations.

Wood's History of Albemarle County, Virginia, gives a list of their children. But we find that this list is incorrect. There is a difference of almost a century between their marriage and the marriage of Sarah, in 1782, who is listed as their daughter, in Wood's History, p. 263.

Hastings Marks, a citizen of Hanover County, Virginia, is proven by his will dated before 11, 5, 1761, to have been the father of the children listed in Wood's History, instead of John. He was probably the son, or grandson, of John Marks and Elizabeth Hastings. The compiler has made this deduction after much study, thought and research. Coinciding names and dates have been a contributing factor in her conclusions, and have made her willing to accept the fact that Hastings Marks headed the second generation of Marks in this country. All of the children of Hastings Marks were living prior to the Revolution, several of them serving in the American Army, that fact alone would prove that they were not the children of a couple married about 1680.

*You will see by the above that the children of Hastings Marks, are identical with the list given in Wood's Hist., p. 262-3, as the children of the immigrant John Marks, he may have had the same names in his family, but it is not likely that they were the same in number and name.

Peter^3 Marks (Hastings^2, John^1) probably lived in Charlottesville, Va., as his business operations were mainly connected with the real estate of the town. In 1779 he was Escheator for the county, and during the Revolution for the confiscation of the property of those who took sides with the British. In 1791 he bought from Mr. Monroe the square on which stood the store of T. J. Norman, his death occurred 1795, and left his affairs greatly complicated, taking several years to straighten them up. in fact part of the above purchase was not finally disposed of until 1830.

We find mention of another real estate deal of Peter Marks, and President James Monroe, in conveying his town property to Peter Marks, it is recited that he sold to him the "pine plank and materials deposited thereon, except that which was planed, and the walnut plank, and reserved in the house, room for his furniture and family, until the houses on the farm were ready for occupancy." (Wood's Hist. Albemarle Co., Va., p. 262-280.*

Peter Marks was one of the Signers of the Albemarle Declaration of Independence, 4, 21, 1779; original preserved in Hist. Society of Va., Wood's Hist. Albemarle Co., Va., p. 365. He married Joanna Sydnor, of Virginia, and had issue;

The Nicholas family aforementioned are all descendants of Dr. George Nicholas, the immigrant of Albemarle Co., Va. (See p. 289, Woods' Hist., Albemarle Co., Va) through his son John, who was Clerk of Albemarle County, 1750, until 1792, in that year he resigned to spend the rest of his life in the southern part of the county; his children were: 1. John, m. Louisa Howe Carter, 2. Robert, 3. George, 4. Joshua, m. Sarah Marks, 5. Elizabeth, 6. daughter———, m.————Scott.

There is a difference of opinion as to the father of Hastings Marks, who married Ann Scott Jefferson. some say that he was the son of Peter Marks. others give him as the brother of Peter. According to our tracing he was James^3 Marks (Hastings^2, John^1) was born 1745; m. 12, 24, 1771; died 1816; was a Magistrate of Albemarle County, Va., 1783. Signed the Renunciation of Allegiance to Great Britain, Apr. 21, 1779; the original of which is preserved in the Historical Society, of Richmond, Va. His will was signed 3, 7, 1816; prob. Oglethorpe County, Ga., 9———1816; Wits. Chas. L. Matthews, Thomas Wiley, Voluntine Meriwether.

James Marks lived on a farm consisting of 800 acres, near Keswick Depot, Albemarle County, Va., and likely including it. Emmigrated with his family to Georgia, and when taking this step sold his plantation to his brother-in-law, John Harvie. In 1780 when many were emmigrating to other states, for a time, the practice was prevalent on the part of those expecting to change their domiciles, of applying to the County Court for a formal recommendation of character, and certificates were given them, declaring them to be honest men and good citizens. Among those commended to the people of Georgia was James Marks, who with his family settled in Oglethorpe Co., near Broad river. He built for his wife the finest home in Georgia, at the time, and being hospitably inclined, this was constantly open to friends, acquaintances, and loved ones. He was shrewd and sharp witted. His family were the first of the Broad river people to quit the forms of the Episcopal Church for the devotions of the Methodist. They organized the first Methodist Congregation in their neighborhood, 1788. James and his brother Peter Marks, were non-commissioned officers in the Revolution. James Marks and Bishop Asbury were especial friends, and the Bishop made the Marks house his home when he was in that locality. (Gilmer's Georgians.)

war to Fort Delaware, and kept for six months until the close of the war, when General Lee surrendered.

After being discharged he returned to his home in Alabama, and after the death of his father took charge of the plantation, and assumed guardianship of the younger brothers and sisters.

When the Confederate Veterans of Kentucky organized in 1901, he became a charter member of this group and served as Commander of Confederate Veterans of Ky. For several years he was Commander of the 4th Brigade, of the Kentucky Division, U. C. V. During the year preceding his death he was honored with the Honorary rank of Brigadier General, being promoted from Colonel of Staff to this rank. He was greatly interested in the activities of this organization, and took an active part in many of their reunions.

He became ill while attending the reunion at Puree Valley, November 10, 1904 and never rallied. He died at the St. Joseph Hospital, Lexington, Ky., Nov. 20, 1904.

Mr. Marks was an active Mason from his early manhood, and served as Eminent Commander of Webb Commandery, No. 3, of Knights Templar. Was an Elk, and member of the Abe Buford Camp, No. 97, U. C. V. at Versailles, Ky.

He was an ardent student of economics and agriculture, and a constructive reader. He desired and attained a college education and profession for his children.

He was a member of the Episcopal Church, active in the work of his parish and the diocese, and was junior warden of St. John's Church at Versailles, at the time of his death.

Although a loyal and prominent citizen of his adopted state Kentucky, he never lost his intense love for the South, and seldom missed his yearly visit to his native state, Alabama.

On November 7, 1867, he married Miss Ella Farley, of Montgomery, Ala., who lived only a few months. February 12, 1873, he married Miss Lucy Elizabeth Barnett, daughter of Nicholas D. Barnett and Sarah (Powell) Barnett, of Montgomery, Ala. He was living in Montgomery at this time, and here two of his children were born. Nicholas Barnett, who lived to maturity and Louise who died in infancy.

Col. Samuel^{5}B. Marks *was also a Confederate Soldier.

He was a successful farmer, and accumulated what at that time was considered a fortune in farm lands in this region.

His death occurred on November 20, 1904, his wife Lucy Elizabeth Marks, having passed away several years before, on Dec. 2, 1891. Seven children survived them.

Marks, b. 5, 21, 1777, whose wife was the daughter of John, son of Hugh Paul, Bishop of Nottingham, England. (See Harvies sketch, by this compiler).

John^4 Harvie Marks, (James^3, Hastings^2, John^1) married Susan Tomkins* (Tompkins) against his parents wishes. "They never forgave him, and cut him off with $1,000, which he gave to Franklin College, in Georgia. Being too proud under the circumstances to accept help, although he was not rich, he was capable of the greatest intellectual efforts and the highest attainments in science, philosophy, and politics. His quick repartee, keen sarcasm, close, and extensive observation, made him one of the most agreeable talkers of his day. He removed to Jasper County, Ga., where he found a large field for fun and satire, better lands to cultivate, and improved society for his children. He was very industrious and economical, and acquired a large estate. He moved again, this time to Mt. Meigs, bought the Pollard place near Montgomery, Alabama. His humor was constantly hunting material for enjoyment, he was building a log cabin in his yard, when his wife came out and objected to the manner in which he was doing it. He listened patiently for awhile, and finally reasoned with her, but she still insisted on her way, so he just stepped out of his trousers and threw them down to her, telling her to put them on, and wear them. If Tam O'Shanter had been passing by when Jack's dumpy person was perched and breechless, and had heard his spiel to his wife, how he would have shouted, "Well said, short shirt." Mr. Marks was devoted to his wife, and parental objection only served to increase his love." (See Gilmer's Georgians.)

John Harvie Marks, II, came from Alabama, near Montgomery, the little village of Mt. Meigs, in 1834. Settled in Arkansas, bringing the price of the old homestead in Alabama, $17,000, which he invested in Arkansas lands. The purchase including three entire counties, Union, Dorsey, (now Cleveland,) and Bradley, the land ranging in price from .35 to .40 cts. per acre, "Uncle Sam", being the party of the second part. Other members of the Marks family and relatives, who came into the same section later, bought much of this land from John H. Marks, and today the family reunions held in Cleveland County, are attended by hundreds of Marks and Barnett descendants. For most of the children and grandchildren of these pioneers preferred that part of the State to any other, and have raised their families there. The home of John H. Marks, II, was built about 1841, by his own slaves, he being the architect and contractor. It was not grey stone with frescoed walls, but was a typical old Southern home. The finest and most imposing one to be found in that section of the country, at the time it was built, even though it was made of hewn logs, cut and sawed at his own mill. The doors, facings, window sills, and base boards were of solid walnut, the all through the years he has been quoted, and his oddities have made "Uncle Owen's" sayings and doings family by-words. There was no more familiar name on the tongue of the older folks in Georgia, during the time he was in the family. He was living 1878. He was fiery tempered, and sometimes, even sinful, at others, he was loving, considerate, and generous, but it is said that his wife was an angel, because she could overlook the bad and appreciate the good. He inherited much property through his wife, and through his practice and thrift, amassed an additional sum for himself. He was popular in his profession, and held office continually for years. The impression is that he died rich, and the fact is, that he did keep huge sums of gold dollars in his home, and played with it in his last illness as a child would play with toys. He liked the idea of display, which would lend itself to a myth of extraordinary wealth. It was never known who his heirs proved to be. Many traditions are extant as to how it was distributed. A few years ago, about 1920, his grave was opened by ghouls, who had robbed his grave fifty years after his death in search of gold, that was thought to have been buried with him. Another tradition is that it was confiscated during reconstruction days after the Civil War by the State to help defray the cost of the war. One farm then owned by Mrs. Kennan, passed to a niece of hers, on the Marks side, and it is said to still be in the possession of this niece.

trees being then in abundant growth on his land. He had what was a great curiosity, in rural districts, in those days, brick chimneys, the bricks being made in his own kiln. His nearest neighbor was thirteen miles from him, his nearest town eighteen miles. When he had completed his house, save the doors, he left his family, making old Ishmael, the trusted family servant, promise to sleep in the doorway at night, while he, Mr. Marks, rode to the village to secure hinges, etc., to complete hanging the doors. Also ammunition for hunting, etc., for they were largely dependent on wild game for meat. He was compelled to remain all night, and when he returned, the old darkie presented him with a broken gun and the family, with the marvelous account of how old "Daddie Ishmael", at the risk of his own life, had fought against a white man and an Indian, who knowing of Mr. Marks' absence, had come with the motive of robbery. It had become known to the white man, in some way, that the sum of $1800.00 in gold was hidden somewhere in the house, the nearest bank being far distant.

"Daddie" fought valiantly, and later on the skeleton of an Indian was found proving almost certainly that he had received his death blow upon the head by an empty gun in the hands of Ishmael who was freed. And long years afterwards the broken gun on the rack and old Daddie's vacant cabin on the hill, silently attested that all heroes are not white, nor are their names inscribed on history's pages.

The aforementioned home of John H. Marks was burned, and was rebuilt. The latter house is still standing (1934). But the ravages of time have altered it so much that one can hardly realize that it was once a beautiful, comfortable, and happy home. (The above is absolutely true, the facts being given to the compiler by the oldest daughter of John H. Marks, while her mind was clear, and her memory sound and active.)

When Mr. Marks came to Arkansas there was on his land a fortune in walnut trees, at the present price of walnut wood. He had a saw mill, and brought a cabinetmaker from Georgia. He had chairs, tables, beds—furniture of all kinds, made of solid walnut. One of these folding tables was not less than 22 inches wide. He made numbers of these, one for each of his children. When he lived on Bayou Bartholomew his Negro cabins were built of split logs of sassafras and walnut. Can any of us compute what this would Bradley Co., Ark. In that year John H. Marks and others were appointed a committee to locate the County Seat, and they surveyed, and platted the lots of the town of Warren, Ark. Mr. Marks practically owning the whole of the county, many thousand acres, resigned as such commissioner, and was succeeded by his bro-in-law, Nathaniel Barnett. "On the 25th of April, 1864, one of the most important battles of the Civil War, took place at the Mark's home place, the cavalry forces of Gen'l J. F. Fagan's company struck a large wagon train, out from Pine Bluff, Ark., guarded by 2,000 men, and a severe engagement took place, at the mill, with victory for the Confederates. Copied from a note written to Col. J. R. Thornton, by Jack H. Marks, III, known as "Little Jack", immediately after the battle, not being able to find paper, ink, nor pencil, he wrote it on the pages torn from a Natural History, and with a piece of sharpened lead.

Dewoody family is of English and Scotch-Irish descent, although many think it is of French origin. In some branches of the family the name is spelled with a capital "W", that, however seems to be a matter entirely of preference, as first cousins often use the different forms.

The Scotch pronunciation was "Dinwiddie", and we are inclined to think that that was the old way of spelling the name, in early records we find the two names are synonymous, frequently written (Dewoody—Dinwiddie).

"Jim^6 Nick" (James^6 Nicholas) Marks, one of the surveyors of early days, in Arkansas. Branner the noted geologist, who made extensive surveys, in the State, relied a great deal upon Mr. Marks' findings and decisions. Many of Mr. Branner's books quote Mr. Marks upon numerous occasions, as late as 1890.

Jim Nick Marks was born Montgomery, Ala., or near there, Dec. 16, 1823. He was surveyor for Cleveland County. His daughter Sivvie, b. 1859; d. June, 1926, after a paralytic stroke, of only short duration. She and her husband John McPhail lived for awhile in New Edinburgh, Ark. Mr. McPhail was a prominent planter, of Moscow, Ark.; he died about 1901. Mrs. McPhail was interred in Marks Cemetery, at New Edinburgh; she left one son, Alexander.

The following biographical sketch of the life of James Nicholas Marks, was given to the compiler, by Mr. Marks himself.

"I, Jim Nick Marks, born 1823, was 11 years old when I came to this country, 1835, in company with Daniel Frazier, Grandison Hudson, and others of the large family connection including my father Hastings Marks, and my brothers and sisters. We came direct here from Montgomery, Ala. Uncle John Harvie Marks came one year earlier, in 1834—the first ones to reach this section of the country, bought land for all of them. The land was so wild and unbroken, that we could only traverse 4 miles a day, we fared pretty well until we reached the Mississippi river, when our troubles began.

My father Hastings Marks settled near F. M. McGehee's place, and the others all settled within one and one-half miles of the present home of mine. We cut the first road in Cleveland county, and it was from Mark's Mill to the Moro Landing."

James Nicholas Marks is given honorable mention in Branner's Geological report, 1892. V. 2. He was a geological expert, and Mr. Branner said of him, "in the midst of the redlands resides J. N. Marks, who for many years has been the County surveyor, of Cleveland County, and whose love of knowledge, coupled with close observation, has gained for him an uncommon store of knowledge, relating to the physical features of this portion of the State, and it is but just to acknowledge, that the map of Red lands herewith given, is based exclusively upon his observations, much of the area represented was due to Mr. Marks' carefully locating each place, of collecting, or otherwise interesting point by one-half, one-fourth, and section lines, all of which he had run with compass and chain, and about which there could be no uncertainty."

John^{6} H. Marks (Little Jack) Hastings^{5}, John Harvie^{4} Marks, James^{3} Hastings^{2}, John^{1}), was one of the first settlers and influential citizens of Calhoun County, Ark., resided in Moro Township, Chambersville, P. O. He was a native of Ala.; born, 10, 10.? 1823. Son of Hastings Marks, who emmigrated to what is now Cleveland County, Ark., 1835-36, and engaged in farming. He was greatly honored and esteemed by all. He was married in Georgia to Miss Civility Powell, a native of Georgia. To them were born nine children, Mr. Marks died 1845, and his widow in 1877, they moved to Arkansas when their son John H. was thirteen years of age, where he was partly raised and educated. He had previously attended school in Georgia and Alabama. When he was grown he settled on a farm of 220 acres of uncultivated land, this was in 1844, and at the present time there is about 100 acres of it under cultivation. Mr. Marks was the first Magistrate of this township, and of Calhoun County, and was county surveyor for twenty years. Politically he affiliated with the Democratic Party, and cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk. He was a Free Mason. In 1847 he married Miss Matilda J. Thornton, native of Alabama. His death occurred 2, 22, 1897. Left issue;

John H. Marks, (Little Jack) came to Arkansas a year, maybe, after his father, Hastings Marks. His mother and the children stayed with her people, while his father was prospecting in Arkansas. He came with the other Marks who settled around New Edinburgh. After he had been here a few years he worked with a party of surveyors, that were making a map of this county, Calhoun. And when he came to the big spring here, on this place, he told the men that were with him, that when he got to be a man he was coming back here, and make him a home. So when he was about twenty his mother gave him three Negro slaves, two men and a woman. He came here and built a cabin and lived in it until he married. Then he built a larger house that he lived in until he died in 1897.

He was a great lover of nature, and he was a very handsome man. He was on the first jury held in the first county court, Calhoun County. Four of his grandsons were in the World War. John, s. of Douglass, was gassed in a battle, and won the cross of honor for a deed of valor and courage. Hastings, g. s. of William, wounded at Chateau Thierry, 1918. Harvie, s. of Henry, and Donald my son were in France more than a year, but did not take part in any battles. The first of the Marks reunions were held in the home of my father John H. Marks. Members of the Marks family remained active leaders in civic affairs in the new county, and J. N. Marks, a close relative was the first surveyor. Cleveland Co., Ark.

John Harvie Marks and his cousin John H. Marks (Little Jack) were the heads of families, the members of which have been linked with development of South Arkansas and the entire state. From these old Marks' homes the boys and girls went forth to new sections, to raise their own families. And today there are hundreds of descendants of these hardy pioneers scattered over the country.

The history of the Marks family is deeply entwined with the history of Southeast Arkansas.

Mary Sorrells Dewoody, (Mrs. W. L.) dr. of Judge Theodoric F. Sorrells and his wife Rebecca Marks Sorrells, was born at their home in Bradley County, Arkansas, in the town of Warren, June 6, 1854.

Mrs. Dewoody finished her education at Hocker College, later named Hamilton College, Lexington, Ky. This institution was then under the management of President James Hocker. Being a woman of extraordinary intelligence and ability, with great ambition, she made the most of all opportunities given her, and graduated as valedictorian of her class, in 1872, with the highest honors of the college. On Junior Day she was selected from the entire class to read an essay, which was considered of such worth, that several state's papers copied it.

Evan P. Marks, Clerk of the Court, Cleveland County, Ark., 1874-6; Ark. Hist. S. W.

John Marks—Planter. October 23, 1734, Alexander Spotswood, Esq., to John Marks, planter. Lease of 100 acres in St. Mark's Parish, Spottsylvania County, Va., on s. side of Rapidan, part of tract granted Spotswood and called Spotswood tract, etc. John Marks, Mary the wife and Mary the daughter of sd. John Marks, etc. (Copied from page 136 Spottsylvania County Records).

In her church and social life she always faithfully and conscientiously discharged her obligations, holding many high offices of honor and distinction. For many years was president of her foreign Missionary Society, of the First Methodist Church, Pine Bluff, Ark. Regent of the Pine Bluff Chapter, Daughters American Revolution; State Historian of the Arkansas D. A. R.; State Chaplain of Arkansas D. A. R.; Chaplain of Pine Bluff Chapter D. A. R.; Vice President of the Woman's section of the American Pharmaceutical Asso., of which her husband, Wm. L. Dewoody, was a prominent member, and Honorary President; member of the Pioneers Society of Arkansas; member of the Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrams. Eligible through her maternal lines of Nicholas Meriwether, b. in Wales, d. in Va. David Crawford of Scotland came to Virginia, b. 1625; m. 1654, James City Co., Va. to Elizabeth Smith; Maj. Lawrence Smith of Gloucester Co., Va. came with his parents to Isle of Wight Co., Va., 1622; d. 1700; eligible to Colonial Dames through twenty-eight proven ancestral lines on both the maternal and paternal lines. She traced her descent from several of the Magna Charta Barons, Knights of the Garter and to the Order of the Crown through many lines. She was eligible to almost every patriotic society in America, which has been organized for the preservation of records. Through the Thorntons, her line goes back into numerous royal lines of Europe, tracing descent from ADAM. (See Kinship of Families, a wonderful chart prepared by Utah Gen. Soc. July, 1928.)

Beside her work along patriotic lines, Mrs. Dewoody had other interests. She was president of the Mother's Half Club, a literary study club, now known as the Sesame. She was a valued and charter member. Member of W. C. T. U. and other organizations for the welfare of women and children, and the betterment and uplift of humanity. She was acknowledged to be one of Pine Bluff's outstanding citizens. Mother of 13 children, seven of whom survive her.

During the World War she was untiring in her service, was a member of the Civilian Relief Committee and the Red Cross. Gave sufficient hours in the sewing room to secure an Honor Pin. She knitted and rebuilt more than one hundred pairs of socks for the soldiers. Possessing wonderful energy and activity, her hands were never idle. Dozens of pieces of her handiwork are so handsome and represent so much of her, that they are handed down as heirlooms. A gifted letter writer, her epistles are treasured by her children, and all so fortunate as to receive a letter from her.

Mrs. Dewoody joined the Christian Church, while in College, 1871. Later because there was no Church of her faith in Pine Bluff and because she wanted to anchor her husband and children in their religious life, she transferred her membership to the Methodist Church, in which she was a loyal, earnest and consecrated Christian.

Thomas^{7} Meriwether Marks (Tom M.) Frank M.,^{6} John H.,^{5} John^{4} H., James^{3}, Hastings,^{2} John^{1}) born in Cleveland Co., Ark., 11, 28, 1865. His mother was Rebecca Eleanor Dansby, dr. of Robert and Elizabeth (Meriwether) Dansby.

Bertha Belle White^{8} (Mary McGehee)^{7} White, Amelia (Emily)^{6} Marks McGehee John H.^{5} Marks II, John^{4} H. Marks, I, James^{3}, Hastings^{2}, John^{1}) was born Moscow, Jefferson Co., Ark. old colonial home was the finest and most beautiful on Broad River. (Gilmer's Georgian's) This family gathering was held at the home of "Cousin Jim Nick" Marks, as he was lovingly called. And from three counties, came almost as many hundred relatives to pay loving tribute to this wonderful and most interesting old man, the oldest member of the family now living (1916). Although he is nearing the century mark and very proud of having attained the ripe old age of 93 years, is still in possession of good health, and an unusual memory.

One of the interesting things was the barbecue pits, presided over by Hastings Marks, a son of the host. He was assisted by old family darkies, who were experts in preparing the "old time" Southern barbecued meats. The glowing coals beneath the huge portions of pork, kid, beef, and veal, and the savory juices used for basting, brought all to an appetizing perfection. And even now in memory, I recall the delicious odors that emanated from the woodland kitchenette. The coffee was made in old iron pots that had been in the family since long before the war.

At 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, a platform was erected, and a throne placed on it. This was under the shade of a magnificent old oak tree, planted there when Jim Nick Marks first settled at the old place, and to this place of honor, Mrs. Martha Marks Hudson and Mr. Jim Nick Marks, as the two oldest representatives of the family were escorted and seated. A grand march was formed, and around and around this venerable couple we marched, singing appropriate airs. At the conclusion, two little girls crowned the host and guest with wreaths of crepe myrtle, and to the honoree was presented a huge arm bouquet of beautiful flowers. In response to calls for a speech, that wonderful old man, totally blind, arose and made a splendid talk, relating to the early family history, as he remembered it. Some of the facts as he gave them, are as follows:

"Arkansas, Arkansas, my earliest recollection, is that I have always loved this grand old State. I was only eleven years old when in 1836, the children and grandchildren of John Harvie Marks, I, son of James Marks, before mentioned, and his wife Susan Tomkins, left Montgomery, Ala. fired with the spirit of adventurous enthusiasm , and with a desire to explore the unknown wilds of the Arkansas Territory. For days we traveled, living as most pioneers do, camping by night, and depending largely on our guns for the meat. This, however, was more of a pleasure than a hardship, and we fared pretty well until we reached the Mississippi river, then our troubles began. The older members of the party having only one goal in view, Southwestern Arkansas, kept up their courage, and after weary days came to their journey's end, and took charge of the land that had been bought for them by Uncle John H. Marks, II, who came out in 1834, with his brother-in-law, Nathaniel Barnett.

John Harvie Marks and Nathaniel Barnett bought the whole of three counties, Union, Dorsey, (now Cleveland) and Bradley. This deal was later shared by others, coming later from Alabama, and that is the reason as the old darkies say, 'dis neck of the woods is full of Marks, and Barnetts'.

"In father's party were Daniel Frazier, Grandison Hudson, and their families. In Uncle John's party were the Hudsons and Barnetts, McDaniels, (Channings), Chownings, etc. My father Hastings Marks, settled near S. M. McGehee's place. And all of the others settled within one and a half miles of this place. Of the children in these two parties were several who grew to manhood and womanhood, and became prominent citizens and land owners of this and other sections of the State. Namely; James Marks, who later moved to the Red Lands, of Louisiana, and accumulated a vast estate. Evan Marks, of Fordyce, William D. Marks, a gallant soldier of '61 and many others".

On the return trip home, we detoured from the main road a mile and a half, enabling us to visit the old homestead of John Harvie Marks, II, built in 1835, between New Edinburg, Ark. and Kingsland. Except for the natural deterioration, it is almost the same old place. Many of the old land marks are missing. The old mill which marked the site of the battle of Mark's Mill, has long since gone to decay, and there remains nothing to designate the scene of battle. Although histories scarcely mention the battle of Mark's Mill, it is absolutely true, that there were more men killed and wounded there than in the first battle of Manassas. On our tour of inspection we peeped into the old smoke house and saw the immense old gum troughs, into which the lard was poured, after having been rendered in iron pots. The same old beams are there, from which hung the great sides of meat. We saw the room in which the meat was cured, and many other interesting relics of those days of peace and plenty.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of this old home is that the doors, facings, window sills, and base boards are of solid walnut, cut from the abundant growth on the land of John H. Marks, II, cut, sawed, and turned, at his own mill.

We then went on up the hill, across the creek, through the orchard, into the "family burial ground", and as we looked at the inscriptions on the stones marking the last resting places of our honored and illustrious forebears, we bowed our heads in respect to the memory of those sturdy pioneers, who came into a country so wild and unbroken, that it took them a whole day to cover a distance of four miles. Those men cut the first road in Cleveland county, from Mark's Mill to the Moro Landing. We saw the grave of Nathaniel Barnett, son of Captain William Barnett, a soldier of the Revolution, from Elbert County, Ga. And of his wife, Mary (Polly) Hudson, a daughter of David Hudson, also a soldier of the American Army in the war of '76.

May we pay tribute to those sturdy pioneers, who were of hardy, vigorous stock, endowed with that spirit of pluck and perseverance, that caused a desire to penetrate and develop the southwestern part of Arkansas Territory, then a great unknown wilderness. Showing no fear, or having no doubts, although the country was almost in its primitive state. Infested with wild animals and lacking all educational and religious privileges. They had no sooner found a home in the wilderness than they betook themselves to clearing fields, building houses and planting orchards. Like men who felt themselves now settled, and were disposed to cultivate the arts of civilized life. The first houses erected by the settlers were log cabins. Many had covers of split clapboards and weight poles to keep them in place. Some had frame and stone buildings erected prior to the Civil War. The general mode of building was of hewn logs, shingle roof and plank floors; the plank cut out with the whip saw. The saws our ancestors Marks and Barnetts used in the building of their homes is still (1934) in the possession of T. M. Dansby, Kingsland, Ark. M. D. P.

By James Gould, Pine Bluff, Ark.

This historical narrative is intended as a continuation of J. Harvie Hudson's sketch, and to relate some facts not mentioned by him. As I am sure they were omitted because of his not caring to be too personal in family matters.

I knew much of the Marks' family history. As a boy I visited this home often, and have a personal knowledge of the sons and daughters. My mother's sister, Mary M. Barnett, was John H. Marks' first wife. She was a daughter of Nathaniel Barnett, who came to this state about the same year that Mr. Marks came to Arkansas.

Nathaniel Barnett, my maternal grandfather settled in what is known as the old Barnett home near New Edinburg. And about two miles from the old Jack (John H.) Marks' home, close neighbors in those days.

My grandfather's home as well as the original Marks' home was built out of hewn logs, and after one hundred years is still in an excellent state of preservation. The land still produces good crops of cotton.

No portion of Arkansas ever produced men and women, who excelled the descendants of these pioneers. Women of sterling character, men of the highest honor and integrity. While most of them had slaves to come and go at their beck and call, the men could be found tilling the soil, the women cooking a meal that would appease the appetite of a king. The Marks family without exception were men and women of prominence in the old red land township.

Miss Rebecca Marks married Judge T. F. Sorrells, one of the great lawyers of Bradley County, and an outstanding circuit Judge of his district for a number of years. It is said of him that he hauled a Petit Jury over his district in a covered wagon for two weeks from court to court, until they rendered a verdict. This couple reared a family of prominent sons and daughters. One of whom was Judge of this Circuit; Hon. W. B. Sorrells, dec'd. He had two sons who are eminent in the editorial world, John H. Sorrells, of New York City, and Walter B., Jr., of this city. "Billie" (William) Sorrells well-known druggist, an enterprising citizen of Hot Springs, Ark., for years before his death, was another son of Judge T. F. Sorrells. The late Mrs. Mary S. Dewoody, of Pine Bluff, Ark.; wife of the late W. L. Dewoody, a prominent druggist of Pine Bluff, Ark. was a daughter of Judge T. F. Sorrells. She passed away Nov. 20, 1934.

The second daughter of John H. Marks, II, m. Capt. James Madison Hudson, of Pine Bluff, Ark.; a distinguished Confederate soldier. And at one time a successful business man and a leader in the political and social life of the state. Their children are: J. Harvie Hudson, Walter C., Mrs. R. M. Vance, of Pine Bluff, Ark., Mrs. J. L. DeGroot, Oklahoma City, and the late C. E. Hudson, of Dallas, Texas.

The third daughter of John H. Marks, m. Tom Dansby, who died a year after their marriage, leaving one son Tom, who became a well-known citizen of Pine Bluff, Ark. Later he moved to Kingsland, Ark., where he engaged in the mercantile business. Mrs. Dansby, m. 2nd, Capt. Valentine Meriwether McGehee, a valiant soldier of the lost cause. From this union there was one son, Madison Tate (Mat), who served under ex-President Theodore Roosevelt in the Spanish American War, with great honor. He died in 1934. He was survived by two sisters, Mrs. Barbara Russell, of Pine Bluff, Ark. and Mrs. A. W. Nobles, of Star City. Another sister Mrs. R. M. Atchley, of Dalark, Ark., d. 1930.

The sons of John H. Marks' first marriage were Billy, Frank and James. Billy was a Captain in the Southern army, and a leader in his regiment. It was he who came to his father's home at midnight before the Marks Mill fight the next day, and whispered to his sister Matty Marks of the intended battle. I give it from lips of old settlers, who were almost eye witnesses of this, one of the great, smaller battles of the Civil War, that it was due to his leadership, and courage, that the Southern Army won a great victory, with a comparatively small loss. He was cited for bravery by his General.

After the war ended, Billy Marks gave the same energy to his private affairs that he did in fighting for his home and family. He died leaving a comfortable fortune to his widow and children.

The other sons settled on their farms and were all outstanding men in their County's affairs.

John H. Marks married second Miss Nancy C. Bouldin. From this union there were three sons and two daughters, John H. Harvie, Jr., Edward Hastings, and James E. The daughters were Susan and Eleanor. These carried on the Marks and Barnett tradition by rearing families of prominence and distinction.

I now turn from the Marks' history to that of Nathaniel Barnett, who was a prominent citizen in the life of his adopted state. Having moved to Arkansas from Alabama about 1834, and settled on what is still known as the Barnett home place. At that time being in old Bradley County, later Dorsey, and then changed to Cleveland County. Nathaniel Barnett's family consisted of his wife, three daughters, and two sons. In addition to a large number of slaves. Not a cabin for the slaves; not a barn for the mules and cattle, and no home for his family, was available when he arrived in Arkansas. But with the spirit that made the old South hold out in those terrible years of the struggles of the war, he soon had log cabins for his slaves, a log house for his family, and the virgin forest cleared away ready for the plow. And when he passed away some years before the Civil War he left each of his children independent in slaves, mules, cattle and gold. Nathaniel Barnett's eldest daughter was the first wife of John H. Marks. The next daughter, the wife of my father, Judge Josiah Gould, who was one of the great lawyers of his day. My mother died before the Civil War, leaving me a youth, as her only heir.

The youngest daughter married Dr. Tom Chowning, who lived near old Toledo, now Cleveland County, a fine Doctor of his day. To this union were born four children, all of whom are now dead. One in early life, Dr. Jack, and Barnett, died in early manhood, but had made a mark before death for outstanding ability.

The youngest, a daughter, who married E. W. Emerson, died years ago. The oldest son Doctor Billy Barnett, lived to advanced age. His wife passing away some years before his death. He left four children, two sons and two daughters. The oldest child, young Billy Barnett married Eleanor Marks, daughter of John H. Marks, and second wife, Nancy Bouldin. Fanny married Dr. Jack Chowning, a promising young doctor. Adda married Clark Attwood, one of Cleveland County's most progressive farmers whose descendants still carry on as their parents before them. Charley, the youngest was a successful farmer. These have all gone over the great divide. Dr. Billy Barnett so well known in South Arkansas was one of the greatest physicians of his time. I have heard Dr. Brunson, a doctor of Pine Bluff, say time and time again, if Doctor Bill had stayed in Louisville, Ky., where he graduated in medicine, he would have been a national character. But he preferred to remain at the old homestead with his neighbors and his pack of deer hounds. I lived in his home after my mother's death, and have seen him many times ride into the yard on old "Selim" his trusted horse, so stiff and cold that it was necessary to lift him off and put him to bed under blankets, and with hot irons to his feet, yet he would be ready in a few hours to heed a call for another weary ride, knowing, too, that the pay was doubtful.

The younger son, Nick Barnett, was a successful farmer and merchant. He left a large family of sons and daughters who were prominent in their day. Nick Barnett lived and died on his old home place, near Toledo, Ark. He was one of the outstanding men of his time. And did much to bring back to prosperity the impoverished land owners of his section. Who had lost their all under the cruel ravages of war. And the dastardly days of carpet bag rule and reconstruction times.

A daughter, Mrs. Walter S. Amis, one of the last of the family, makes her home in Little Rock, Ark. Her husband a prominent lawyer having passed away years ago.

In concluding this article I want to mention Hastings Marks, a brother of John H. Marks, II. He came to Arkansas soon after his brother. And was a soldier of the Mexican War. His descendants like those of John H. Marks were builders, and what has been said of them, may also be said of Hastings Marks and his family. He was the father of Evan P. Marks, a well known merchant and civic leader of New Edinburgh, Ark. And of "Jim Nick," a county surveyor for a number of years. George M. (Dock) and of John H. ("Little Jack") of Chambersville, Ark.

It is a matter of record that the Marks family furnished approximately seventy-five soldiers for the World War.

The Marks family holding the record for reunions, on July 18, 1933; gathered on the banks of the Saline river, at Poole, Ark., near Rison, for their fifty-sixth consecutive annual event.

Included in the membership of the family are hundreds of men and women, who are prominent in business, social and political life of the South. The oldest members of the family as far as known, were Mrs. W. L. Dewoody, Pine Bluff, Ark., in 80th year; Mrs. Kate Amelia Marks, in 79th year; William Marks, 78, and Mrs. Ellie Marks Barnett, of Kingsland, Ark., in 80th year. When the family reunions were first started there were 18 ex-Confederate soldiers in its ranks, and at the reunion held 1877 these veterans were organized into a drill team, by Capt. Webb, and gave a program for the reunion attendants.

Nineteen hundred thirty-four the hundredth anniversary of the coming of the Marks, Barnetts, Hudson, Channings (Chownings) and other connected families to Arkansas. They left Montgomery, Ala., and came in the primitive way, the covered wagon, and suffered the hardships of pioneers. Traversing every mile of the way under the most difficult and the most dangerous conditions. We who have been reared in the lap of luxury, can not conceive of the bravery, the heroism, the spirit of adventure, that spurred these hearty men and women on through privations of every kind. God! what men, what women, they were to face bravely with unfaltering courage, zeal and hardships inconceivable to their descendants of this generation. All honor to the Covered Wagons and their occupants, who without flinching spent weary months on their way to locate homesteads for themselves and their families. They blazed the trails which are now spanned by concrete highways. Today, we, carefully protected from the sun, rain, sleet, and the snow and all vagaries of the elements, comfortable in expensive glass enclosed automobiles, roll smoothly, and swiftly, along scenic highways, through countries glorified by God, and beautified by man, gliding on to music from the car radio. Priding ourselves on covering hundreds of miles a day, quite different from the four miles through the unbroken wilderness and undergrowth, that were cut and traveled by the pioneers. If there is urgent need and the automobile is not speedy enough to keep up with this high pressure age, one soars and roars at a terrific rate covering the distance from coast to coast, in less time, than from daylight to dark, with undisputed right of way through the air. Just what would our practical forefathers have thought then, if they could have foreseen this vibrant age? They probably would have wished that they could have had the luck of Rip Van Winkle, and slept on through the hard years in which it was their lot to live. Is it not wonderful to be alive in such an age as this?

Notes, Letters, etc.; from Harvey M. Templeton, Atty. Winchester, Tenn., 1911. Elisha Marks, married Elizabeth Lashbrook? Or Loughborough? He was probably of Va. ancestry and numbered among his connections Ellen Glasgow, the noted authoress, and the late Senator Daniel, of Virginia, whose daughter was an influential, strong member of the faculty of Wesleyan Institute, Staunton, Va. for many years.*

Elisha Marks, and wf. Elizabeth Lashbrook? Loughborough? Had issue; among them being Governor Albert S. Marks, b. near Owensboro, Ky., 10, 16, 1836; at the age of 19 years, he went to Tennessee and began the study of law. He served in the Civil War. He was named Colonel of the 17th Tenn. Confederate Regiment, May 1862; he lost a leg at Murfreesboro, Tenn. in the Confederate service.

In 1878, A. S. Marks was elected Governor of Tennessee; his term of office being 1879-81; gubernatorial returns showed 89,018 votes for Marks. He lived in Franklin County, and was a lifelong Democrat; was originally opposed to Secession. At the time of his nomination for Governor he was Chancellor of his District.

He died in Nashville, Tenn., 11, 4, 1891. (Reg. of Ky. State Hist. Soc.)

Julia Marks, of Clarke Co., Ala., b. 1825; m. Daniel G. Pipkin, came immediately to Arkansas, in the 40's, settled in Union County, then Ouachita, near Camden, on what is now two bayous, 10 miles w. of Camden. After twelve years they moved to Columbia County, Ark. Mrs. Julia Marks Pipkin's father was a planter, and lived on Suggsville Road, he died early in life, while the children were small, this was before the Civil War. The old home in Suggsville is still standing (1930). Others of the Marks family lived near Suggsville. Children of Mr. ———Marks were; Fleming, John, Anne, m. Stephen Pipkin; Jane, m. Mr. Collier; Julia, m. Daniel G. Pipkin; Mary Williamson, buried in Victoria, Texas; m. Rev. Mr. Shipman, a member of the Ouachita Conference. Mrs. Julia Marks Pipkin was killed by one of her own slaves, and the children were reared by Rev. Richard, of Suggsville.

Anne Marks and her husband Stephen Pipkin, also came to Arkansas in the 40's, but moved to Texas later.

Children of Julia Marks Pipkin and her husband Daniel G. Pipkin, among others was Dr. E. M. Pipkin, a prominent Methodist Minister, of Arkansas, born in Columbia County, Ark., in what is now Nevada County. He married Ella Jewell, dr. of Rev. Horace Jewell, a Methodist Minister, they had children, Dr. John Pipkin, Daniel, Jewell; m. Porter Lindsay, lives Pine Bluff, Ark., Dr. Edgar, Dr. Charles W. before 1911, both married, and left a child each. Arthur married Miss Mary Hunt; she married 2nd, A. R. Gholson, Clarksville, Tennessee; her son Albert[1] Marks married Miss Jackson, Nashville, Tennessee, and their son lived (1911) with his mother in Nashville, Tenn. I married Vella Handly, of this place, daughter of Mrs. R. C. Handly, who was a sister of Gov. A. S. Marks.

From Commercial Appeal—1910.

Governor A. S. Marks owned, and lived in "Historic Hundred Oaks", near Winchester, Tenn.; this is, or rather was an immense, palatial like building planned along the lines of an old English castle. For many years it was, and perhaps is yet, the handsomest home in Tennessee, and its history is as interesting as the place is beautiful. The castle as it might be called, sits in the center of an elevated plat of ground of about 30 acres, heavily wooded. Oaks predominate; hence the name. Some years before the War, 1862, the Hunt family was one of the wealthiest in Middle Tennessee. They bought the place and erected the first brick residence built in that section, a two story, and a handsome house. The Civil War brought conditions that broke up the family fortunes, and the place was purchased by Gov. Albert S. Marks, soon after the war. He moved there and occupied it as his home, rebuilding it at the same time. The place was completed as it now appears in about 1872. It was handsomely finished in hardwood, and the old English Hall contained one of the finest libraries in Tenn. The place later passed to Gov. Marks' son Arthur, who married Miss Mary Hunt, uniting the lineage of the first owner with the new. A few years later Arthur Marks sold the place to the Paulist Fathers, having been converted to that faith, and it then became the principal retreat for the Order in America. Priests came from every quarter of the United States, and spent much time there in reconsecration, and recreation.

After selling the place to the Paulist Fathers, Arthur Marks devoted much time to teaching Catholicism to his friends and relatives. One of his converts was his brother Albert D. Marks, and another was his cousin Marks Handley, a newspaper reporter on the Nashville American. Handley professed the faith, joined the Paulist Order, and became a Paulist Father. For a time he was stationed at "Hundred Oaks", as an instructor, but later entered a Catholic Mission in California.

Governor A. S. Marks entertained lavishly in this pretentious dwelling, dignitaries from far and near, and representatives of the most prominent families of Tennessee. The stately oak trees had not been touched by an axe in 1910, and the outward appearance is about the same as it was when Gov. Marks was at the height of his fame and prominence, the interior has undergone many changes. It has been altered to meet the taste and use of the Paulist Fathers.

The big English hall has been converted into a chapel, where mass is said daily. The double parlors of unusual size are now the auditorium, where lectures, etc., are given, the grounds are now the recreation field for the Priests.

But from the picture of the exterior of "Historic Hundred Oaks" one can hardly realize that it was ever built for anyone less than a Lord of the Realm.

From Mrs. B. S. Foster;

"In 1896-79 I corresponded with Albert Davis Marks, son of Gov. A. S. Marks, of Tennessee, relative to family history. He knew where his father's people, the immediate forebears, etc., were located. And although he had had the Court records searched, he had very little information on his Marks lineage, if at all, prior to the Revolution. But he did have all the links back to Elisha Marks of that period—perhaps one further back. He had traditions of unusual wealth. There had never in their history been a time when the Marks were not their own masters, and owned their own lands and houses. And that the name came from the Marcas of the Scottish border."

Notes from Mrs. B. S. F.—

In the history of the Monmouth Rebels there are listed many men under the various forms of the Marks name. There were some four men on the Ship Betty, 1685-6; but of course it remains to identify these Marks men by the families (and dates) known to have been their intimates on both sides of the water. And there is literature concerning those rebels, "many of whom were men of birth and education".

The tradition coming to me through my mother does not imply that a Marks married Miss Hastings, but that one grandmother Marks' mother was the daughter of an English nobleman. He was an Earl; I had never heard it, and my mother told me in response to my inquiry as to Cousin Charlie Cargile's middle name, as he had it on the fly leaf of a gift book to myself, about 1876. And that is all Mama knew, except that she was disinherited. After I was grown I asked Uncle Charles Cargile, son of Mary Marks, if the statement I quote were true, he answered, "I have heard it."

Letters, Records, etc.

From Miss Helen Marks, San Francisco, Cal.

"The Marks came from Normandy. Godfrey Marks came from Normandy to England, and settled there. His son Miles was an officer in the Army of Oliver Cromwell. When the war was over he settled in Waterford, Ireland. The Marks family were quite wealthy, and frequently made trips, or visits to relatives in France and England. Miles Marks was a brother of John Marks, Esq., who married Lady Elizabeth Hastings, in England, and came to America many years before the Revolution, settling in Virginia. Some of their descendants went to Kentucky, and later some of them went to Tennessee. Governor Albert S. Marks, a very brilliant lawyer was of this branch. He had two sons, Albert, and Davis Marks.

Notes; URQUHART—By Eleanor Lexington—

Urquhart family is of Scottish origin—and was originally Urchard. Aberdeen, Scotland was a home of the family, and the chief of the house at one time was Beauchamp Colclough Urquhart, of Meldrum County, Aberdeen. One of the homes was Craigston Castle in Aberdeen and Hilton Castle in Cromarty was another stronghold of the clan.

Virginia was the chosen home of the Urquharts in this country. Here they settled in early days, and many of them remained. Some of the family migrated to Georgia. It was in this State that the Urquharts and McGehees became related by marriage. Mrs. Caroline (Urquhart) Downing has compiled the Family History of the two families.

pleasure of converting his uncle, Governor A. S. Marks, also his cousin's wife, Mrs. Albert Marks, to the Catholic faith. Father Handley's mother was Miss Elizabeth Marks, dau. of Elisha Marks. Father Handley a very eloquent clergyman is a Missionary, of Washington, D. C. I think he is not long in any one place.

We have the Marks family Coat of Arms; James Marks, Esq., 1828. The Marks family are very proud of their blood, they thought the Lord made them, and the rest came by chance. My uncle John Marks had a book of the Marks family, which was destroyed in the great fire which occurred in the sixties, and laid the city of San Francisco in ruins.

Rebecca Rock is a gr. gr. dau. of Capt. Rock, of the British Navy. Thos. E. Marks, a cousin of mine (Miss Helen Marks) was quite prominent and popular. He was on the Governor's Staff, died when he was the age of twenty-seven. Nearly all of this branch of the Marks are Roman Catholics. The Marks family had the name of being very handsome. And show their blue blood, by all having very small, well shaped feet. Family names in this branch are Miles, Brandscome, Moore, Daniel, Grey, etc. I always enjoyed Mrs. Taylor's letters, she was positive that we were all of the same Marks family. She sent me some of the very old pictures, which some of the San Francisco branch resemble.

LETTERS, ETC.

From Miss Anne Marks Williams, Montgomery, Ala.

"I too, have been anxious to get our exact connections with the Hastings family. When in England a few years ago, I went to Ashby de la Zouch, in Derbyshire, to the ruined Castle of the Hastings; saw the family tombs in the Parish Church, with that of Lord Rawdon, whom family legend says John Marks, brother of James, met in personal combat, during the Revolution, and tried to kill because of some family fued in England. This Lord Rawdon was the son of a daughter, and succeeded to the Hastings lands and titles. The tomb records show that he fought against the American Colonists in the Revolution, and in the Southern section. His grandmother, Countess Selina, had several daughters."

From Mrs. W. T. Brown, Winston-Salem, N. C.

"The Elisha Marks, mentioned in Helen Marks letter, as the grandfather of Rev. From Mrs. Nicholas, Portland, Oregon

Am writing a brief outline of the history of our family, and at the same time giving you all that we know of the Marks family. I shall not go further back than the dates of their immigration to America. The three most familiar names of my husband's ancestors are Col. Peter Jefferson, Col. Joshua Fry, and Dr. George Nicholas. It is with these that I shall begin.

It is through the wife of Col. Peter Jefferson, who married Jane Randolph, daughter of William, of Dungeness, that we trace our family tree back to early 1500. And we can go back through the Ishams, Jane Randolph's mother, to the Earl of Murry, royalty itself. I mention this to show a connection of our family with royalty. Of Col. Joshua Fry, who married Mary Micou, daughter of Paul Micou, physician and surgeon, we have a complete genealogy, from the date that he, (Joshua Fry) came to Virginia, about 1680. He helped to found William and Mary College, and was its President, and at one time Professor and was a warm friend of Col. Peter Jefferson. He was commander-in-Chief of the Virginia forces in 1754, and with Washington, as his Lieutenant and Colonel, he started for Fort DuQuesne, but got no further than Fort Cumberland.

Dr. George Nicholas, the first we know of that name, also married a French woman ———— Warborne? Norborne? immigrated to Virginia, very late in 1600, or early in 1700. Settled at seven Islands near James River, near Richmond, Va. Their son John Nicholas, m. Martha Fry, dau. of Col. Joshua Fry and his wife Mary, (Micou) Fry. Joshua Fry Nicholas, their son, married Miss Marks (given name unknown to us) daughter of Ann Scott Jefferson and Col. Hastings Marks; supposed to have been the son of Peter Marks of Richmond, Va. Peter Marks was always called cousin by my husband, as were his children, also, Col. Hastings Marks and his wife

Miss Jefferson, lived in Southern Virginia, where the heat was very excessive. Every summer Thomas Jefferson, her brother would send his servant and equipage to the South for her, so that the greater part of her life was spent at Monticello, and after her husband's death it became her permanent home. (This is found in the "Domestic Life of Thomas Jefferson," written by his granddaughter, Sally Nicholas Randolph, a very interesting book which we have.) Miss Marks, or rather Mrs. Joshua Fry Nicholas, evidently made her home there for grandfather Nicholas, her son told me that he was born at Monticello, 1807; the home of Jefferson. Joshua Fry Nicholas and family immigrated to Kentucky when Grandfather Peter Marks Nicholas was only about two or three years old. One of his daughters married Phillip B. Winn, a native Virginian, who founded the town of Winchester, Ky., where they all lived. Some are still living there. My husband and daughter visited them a few years ago, and saw the old Nicholas place. A pear tree over two hundred years old, planted by a former owner was still standing and bearing.

The home unfortunately had been destroyed by fire a few years previously. Joshua Nicholas after the death of his wife returned to Virginia, died there, and was buried in the family burying ground at Monticello. One of our cousins, William D. Nicholas, of Lexington, Ky., visited the place, and found the tombstone with his name on it. His wife, of course, died in Winchester, Ky., but the location of her grave is unknown. When quite a young man Grandfather left his home and went to Missouri. He took with him his Negro body servant, but sold him before going very far, to a friend of the family, who afterwards for a like sum returned the Negro to his father, and his old home, where the slave lived until his death. He and his old mother, "Aunt Lucy", who was over a hundred years old when she died, were faithful old servants, and never left the family after gaining their freedom. Grandfather, Peter Marks Nicholas, married Tabitha Splawn, in Missouri. She was from Tennessee. He being reared as a "gentleman" knew nothing of work, but fortunately had a good education, and made use of it in a clerical way, and in teaching. But finally being forced to give place to younger and more capable educators, he retired to a small farm. Three children were born to them; Horace Brown Nicholas, born in Pattonsburg, Mo., 1850; the youngest was my husband. They lived in different parts of Missouri; I don't remember just where. But during the Civil War lived in a settlement composed mostly of Northerners. As his father and friends were Southern sympathizers, it was very unpleasant for them to remain there. It was very probable that his oldest son Meriwether Lewis Nicholas, about seventeen would be forced into the Northern army, while his father would have been willing for him to serve for the South. He could not see a son of his fight against his principles and against his own people, so in 1864? with his wife and two small children, Peter Marks Nicholas joined a party of Southerners and started for Oregon. My husband, then a boy of thirteen, with his older brothers and others, walked barefooted, driving the ox teams and stock all the way across the plains. To him it was a most wonderful trip, and he never tired talking of it; in reality the trip was a very dangerous one. Soldiers with officers, were ordered by the Government to attend journeys across, at that time, on account of the uprising of the Indians, Massacres, and deaths from sickness were almost as frequent as in the early forties and fifties, and their party just missed a massacre by a few hours. Arriving here at about the close of the war, times were very, very, hard. Provisions scarce and high, and had quite a struggle for a time to get along, as did every one. At Walla Walla my husband was given fifty cents and sent into the city to buy something in the way of vegetables. They had had nothing green for months, and were very hungry for them. On the way he found a man with a cart load of onions, taking them to town for sale. The lad drew out the money, looked at the man, then at the onions, the man picked out one of the very largest, in another moment the money was exchanged for the onion, and he was off, running at the top of his speed, for camp. At first his family thought that he had nothing, but when they saw the big onion not one complained. At dinner that onion was divided among the four.

As Walla Walla is the land of the big onion, it was a bountiful accompaniment to the dinner. And they all said they had never eaten anything in their lives that tasted half so good.

They had an over-supply of bacon and tobacco, which they sold. These being very scarce and high, brought them quite a sum of money, which helped to buy other things they needed. Arriving at Portland the boys immediately found work in clearing land and burning charcoal, which their father hauled to town and sold to the blacksmiths for a good price, while Grandmother tended to the little home, kitchen and garden. The boys growing older, and working in various ways, soon saved enough to buy fifty acres of land, with a small house on it, where their parents made their home. The boys kept on working following different lines. It was not long till my husband was able to teach school. He taught several years until he saved sufficient means to study law. In those days there were no law schools, but the practical education which he received from the late Judge Shattuck, was of the very best. He was admitted to the bar in 1875, and became a successful lawyer. Handling many celebrated cases, which are cited as precedents in the Supreme Court of Oregon. The last ten years of Grandfather and Grandmother's lives were spent in a little cottage, in one corner of our city, then a surburban home, where they dispensed old time hospitality very much the same as their forefather's in Virginia and Kentucky. The jug was always full, every old neighbor that came along stopped with "Uncle Peter and Aunt Nancy", his second wife, as they were known in their old neighborhood.

Grandfather Peter Marks Nicholas died on his 86th birthday, Dec. 20, 1893; Grandmother, his second wf. died Nov. 27, 1896, aged seventy-two years. They had no children. His first wife Tabitha Splawn, died before he left Missouri. My husband Horace Brown Nicholas* died Nov. 6, 1922, aged seventy-two years and nearly two months, from valvular heart trouble. He was a noble man, a kind, and loving husband and father. (Reference. See Randall's life of Jefferson, President of U. S. A.)

From Mrs. Beulah Nicholas Halliman, Portland, Oregon, daughter of Horace Brown Nicholas* and the writer of the preceding letter.

In the memoirs of Col. Joshua Fry, by Rev. P. Slaughter, D. D., we trace that line direct to Joshua Fry, but there find nothing of the Marks family. In the "Domestic Life of Thomas Jefferson," written by his granddaughter Sarah Nicholas Randolph, I find letters written to both Hastings Marks, and Ann Scott Jefferson, upon the occasion of their marriage, but nothing more. In Kentucky Resolutions of 1798, my father has made various notations, one of which I recall was given him by his father. Captain Peter Marks, and his brother Hastings Marks in late war of 1812; they were his father's uncles and cousins of Madison and Meriwether Lewis. My father never found wherein any connection came in with the Madison family, and of course, we know that Lewis was a cousin through marriage only. It seems such a pity that your letter did not come sooner, as my father might have given you much more information than I. However, I am sure he knew nothing of a Marks marriage into a royal house in England.

I know nothing past Peter Marks, or of the Hastings family. Our books give much on the Jefferson, Randolph and Fry branches of our family, but so very little of the Marks side. My grandmother used to tell us a story of Hastings Marks, and indeed we were never ready for bed until she both told and enacted this story, which we called "Chicken again Whiteman." Hastings Marks and some others, being captured by the Indians, were stripped for torture before execution. A huge fire was built, through which they were forced to run for the enjoyment of the spectators. When Hastings Marks' turn came he crowed and flapped his arms as a rooster, and took a leap through the fire. The Indians became greatly fascinated with this stunt, and cried, "Chicken again White Man," over and over, as they gathered closer and closer around man and fire. At this time Hastings Marks cleverly knocked one of the Indians in the fire, during the excitement which followed. He and the other prisners escaped. I am enclosing our lineage from Peter Marks. A brief sketch of the journey made by my grandparents and two young sons, crossing the plains to our great northwest, written by my mother, Mrs. Horace Brown Nicholas. q. v. I would suggest that you write to Lexington, Ky., and try to get in touch with some of the Nicholas family there, for when father and I visited them some years ago they just seemed overflowing with family history. It has been my regret since, that I did not make notations. (Note— the chart of Mrs. Halliman's family will be found elsewhere in this sketch.)

From Mrs. L. C. Bulkley, Shreveport, La.

There are Johnsons, Graves, Gilmers, Abneys and Beasley children in Shreveport. I never heard the tradition of Jewish origin for the Marks line. One of my first cousins married a Marks, and there were three sons and a daughter, Dr. Etta Marks, of St. Louis, or Cincinnati, could probably be reached by addressing letter just St. Louis. She is a niece of Mrs. Beasley. Mrs. Andrews has a daughter who married a Marks of Montgomery, Ala.

From Kathleen F. Wright, Atlanta, Georgia.

My cousin Miss Laura Peddy, of Newnan, Ga. sent me your note requesting that I give you information concerning John Marks and Susan Tomkins. We are descended from Giles Tomkins and Rhoda Thurman. Giles was a brother of Susan and a son of Humphrey Tomkins and Emily Eubanks. My information was given me by my great aunt, Mrs. Mary Tomkins* Scott, of Putnam Co., Ga., who was born, lived, and died near the old Tomkins home in Putnam Co., Ga. She knew and loved her step grandmother, Sarah (Adams) Tomkins, Giles second wife, and could recall many interesting stories this grandmother told her of the trial and hardships of the early settlers and her own experiences. Cousin Laura Peddy also sent me a letter from Mrs. B. S. Foster, in regard to the Tomkins family, from this I see that both of you are a bit confused in our line. Aunt Mary Scott gave the children of Humphrey Tomkins and Emily Eubanks, as follows: 1. Giles, m. Rhoda Thurman, 2. Sarah Adams, 3. Simeon, d. unm. in La., on Red River; 4. Ellen, m. Wm. Crane, settled in Jasper Co., Ga.; 5. Mary, m. Spencer Crane, bro. of Wm.; 6. Susan, m. Jno. Harvie Marks, I.; and lived in Alabama. The Emily that Mrs. F., has in list of children, was daughter of William Crane and Nellie (Ellen) Tomkins, and married Col. Smith. This cousin Emily Smith visited my grandmother Featherstone, when my mother was a young lady. She remembered her well. Aunt Mary Scott knew the children of all of these sons and daughters of Humphrey Tomkins (Tompkins*) except Susan T. Marks and she knew two of those. Giles Tomkins had only three children. q. v. Miss Peddy and I are among the great, grandchildren of Nicholas Tomkins, and if you want that data of our branch of the family we will be only too glad to give it to you. Nicho Tomkins had 11 children. My father was born in Monticello, Ark. The name has been variously spelled Tomkins, or Tompkins, just as preference dictates.

From Mrs. W. F. Evans, Arkadelphia, Ark., 1909.

Giles Tompkins was my gr. gr. father and son of Humphrey Tompkins. Nellie Crane and Betsy Bradford were aunts of my grandfather Nicholas Tompkins. Mrs. F. . . . a relative says that Nicholas Tompkins was my mother's father; he had five daughters. My mother was Sara; m. B. D. Thomasson, her sister Maria, m. L. H. Featherstone. Mary, m. Irby Scott; Emily Eubanks, m. B. H. Wright; the only one living, 1905; Catherine, m. Joseph Lane; all of Georgia. My maiden name was Eliza Tompkins Thomasson.

From Mrs. Susan Moore, Jackson, Ga., 1, 7, 1911.

"When I was a child Charles, and Eli Hastings, cousins of my mother (Mary Marks Cargile) came to see us. I know nothing of them now. I remember one of my uncles, Giles Tompkins, a brother of my grandmother. His daughter Mary Tompkins raised a family in Putnam County, Ga., and one of her daughters, Mrs. Fannie Scott Leverette, still lives in Eatonton, Ga. Susan Tompkins Marks was my grandmother, she was reared, married and lived to raise a family in Wilkes County, Ga. But moved to Jasper County, Ga., later, and my mother was married in that county. When I was a child my gr. mother moved to Alabama, with other members of the family, and died there sometime between 1836-40. I do not know the date of her death, nor where she was buried."

From R. M. Glencross-Genealogist, 176 Worple Road, Wimbledon, S. W. 20—London, Eng. May 22, '26.

"I discount very much all family tradition that points to titled ancestry in your Marks-Hastings marriage. It should be fairly easy, I should think for you to discover whether your John Marks was a Jew, if he was, it should lessen the search if the Jews kept as good records as I suspect."

From Miss Mary Lewis Jordan, Maysville, Ala., 9, 11, 1911.

"My grandfather, William Moore, m. Mary Marks; had a large family, now all deceased. My mother also had a large family, of whom, 1. Martha, m. Thomas Alexander, and they had a son killed by railroad carelessness. 2. Fleming, m. Miss Ophelia Holman, they live in Texas, and have several children, dates of births, etc., unknown to me. The rest of us are unmarried. My father was a very successful physician and surgeon of reputation, is said to have been one of the three most successful diagnosticians of his day in the South. He loved his profession and his fellowman so well that he was always ready to do charity work. He was the best father in the world and the handsomest, excuse a daughter's love. We have many relics that we prize very much, miniatures of my father, grandfather and grandmother Moore, painted when they were young, also, a handsome one of Meriwether Lewis in his regimentals. We have my grandmother Moore's wedding dress, it is of beautiful dotted mull, very short waist, long train, sleeves a puff, a finger in length. Also, my great, grandmother's staff, a long reed. My grandmother Martha Jordan used it when she was old, it was her mother's. You know the Harvies were very large, and Jefferson sent their weight to England, to prove the English did not degenerate by coming to America. After writing you, I found among my mother's jewelry an old fashioned ring, engraved in it the name 'JOHN HARVIE, O. B. 6, Feb. 1807, ae. 61.' I know that I have often heard its history, for my mother prized everything of the kind. I can't now remember it, and would like to know where he comes in. Do tell me where you got the tradition of John Marks, the Jew? If I ever see my aunt again, I will ask her what she knows about it, he was her great, grandfather. My parents, Jordan grandparents, and great grandfather John Moore and his wife Martha Harvie, are all buried in this county. Grandfather William Moore and his wife Mary Marks died in Coosa, Ala. My father Fleming Jordan, b. 12, 24, 1804, in Georgia; d. 12, 24, 1882, in Alabama. My mother Lucy Jane Moore, b. in Ga., 8, 3, 1809; d. 11, 20, 1885, in Ala. Grandfather Fleming Jordan, b. 2, 4, 1763; d. 8, 4, 1834; grandmother Martha Gaines, b. 6, 22, 1774; in Ga.; d. 9, 26, 1842. We have mislaid some old letters that would be of great interest to you, one was from Mrs. Harper Anderson, wf. of a gr. gr. s. of Lucy (Meriwether) Lewis. They were living at the old home when she wrote. The other letters written many years ago, were from a dear old cousin Peter McGee, his mother was a Marks, dr. of Peter Marks. A great deal of his young life was spent at my grandmother's so he could tell me much of what happened at that time. In one of his letters he said, 'your great grandmother had a large number of servants, more than 100. Every morning it was necessary to send some of them to the mill for the daily ration of meal, the bag was put on a mule, which trotted off alone to mill, but couldn't be forced to go, or do anything else until that duty was performed.' Our family of Moores, or O'Moors, were Scotch-Irish, they first settled in Virginia, afterwards moved to Georgia. The first, or perhaps the second John Moore, m. Martha Harvie, my gr. gr. mother; their son William Harvie Moore, m. Mary, dr. of Capt. John Marks; their dr. Martha Harvie Moore, m. Fleming Jordan, and their son Fleming[1] Jordan, m. 1st coz., Lucy Jane Moore, dr. of Wm. H. Moore. There were four Jordan brothers, who were bankers in England, two came over and established a branch bank, on the James river, in Virginia. One was Fleming, the other I think, was Reuben, I descend from Fleming. I assure you that I never heard of the Jew. I often heard my grandmother speak of her parents, and of her grandparents, and Lady Elizabeth (Betty) Hastings, of her marriage against the wishes of her parents, and of their immigrating to America. Also of her father's hatred of the English, but never a word of the Jew. I am sure that she never heard it or she would have been too loyal not to have told it. My Uncle Judge Moore, who seemed to be posted, told me that the first John Marks was a barrister, and was Lady Betty Hastings' man of business. I suppose in that way they became interested in each other.

"At the time of the death of Meriwether Lewis, my grandfather investigated, and from all that he could learn it was a case of murder, by the people of the house. They moved soon after, out of the country. No one knew where they went, their reputation and standing in the community was not good. I have a photo copy of my great grandfather John Mark's commission as Capt. of the 10th Va. Regt. Signed by his Excellency John Jay, Esq., President of the Congress of the United States, also his resignation. 'Capt. John Marks having served in the War for five years, with great fidelity, is obliged on account of his bad state of health to retire from service, and therefore is permitted to resign. Given under my hand in Camp, this 15, Feb. 1781. William Davis, Colonel.' "

Office Compiler Georgia State Records, Hon. A. P. Candler, 3, 20, 1907; "Gilmer's Georgians" is a very rare book, long since out of print, I have, however, examined a copy in State Library. I find James Marks referred to in the book, and many other people of the same name. There is no reference to their military services.

From E. Dwelly-Kenilworth Road, Fleet, Hants, Eng., 1929. "I search through many thousands of names every month in all classes of records, and I have gone carefully through the 10,000 immigrants sailing from Bristol, and find only three of the name Markes, no variations of the name in these lists.—Vol. 1. 1654-63. Thos. Markes, of Lamfy, destination not given, but prob. Barbadoes. Henry Markes, of Lamfy, same. Vol. 2. 1663-78. Anne Markes sailed to Virginia.

however. The Marks family were very rich and this James married in early life Elizabeth Jordan; (this is an error, James Marks, married Elizabeth Harvie—all family records confirm this. Mrs. C. W. P. Compiler.)

They were all Methodists and Democrats in politics. Farther than this, Governor Gilmer in his book gives us no information. The brothers and sons of James Marks who were numerous, married into other prominent families in Eastern Georgia. One married a daughter of Governor Matthews, and another a niece of Governor Gilmer.

There are in this Capitol no records of Georgians who fought in Revolutionary War, all war records having been destroyed by Sherman's Army in 1864.

From Mrs. M. K. Campbell, to Mrs. B. S. Foster;

Recently read a life of Georgia's grand old man Bishop J. O. Andrews, of the Methodist Church, South. In this book is frequent mention of our relatives Marks, Meriwethers, Gilmers, Matthews and others, who composed the Broad River settlement. She quotes from Hist. Colls. of Georgia. "Among these settlers were the above named ancestors and kinsfolk of ours. Governor George Matthews was a near relative of my grandmother Mary (Marks) Cargile. He was in 1794-5, Colonel of 9th Va. Line, and with his command joined Washington, and was in the battles of Germantown and Brandywine. In a skirmish he was made a prisoner, and kept on board a prison ship, in New York harbor, after exchange he joined Gen. Greene, as Commander of 3rd Virginia Line. He was born in Augusta County, Va. It is certain these people did not come to Georgia until after the Revolution."

REMINISCENCES OF THE LONG AGO

By Mrs. Mary A. E. Pickett

I am an old woman now almost sixty-nine years of age. I was the eldest daughter of John Harvie Marks and wife Matilda Jane Thornton, granddaughter of Hastings Marks and Civility Powell. My mother was the daughter of Col. William Solomon Thornton and Nancy Sweeny.

And I see once more the home of my childhood, and myself once more a little girl, out in the shade of a wide spreading oak, with old black mammy, my father's cook. And while I hold and slowly unwind her thread, I watch her dear old rough clumsy hands, as she knits her stocking. And I listen to the wonderful tales she tells of her young days. "When Marse Hastuns (my grandfather Hastings Marks) moved to de prarers in de ole Yallerbamma (Alabama). You is heared of fitin cows, but chile you don no nuffin' 'bout it. De wile strawberries growed eberwhere, they did, and on Sunday ebenings me and a hole gang of young niggers would go out to hunt em, for da sho was good. And fust thing we know dem wile Yallerbamma cows would see us, and here day would come des a kickin up day heels, and bellowing, making right fer us. We sho' would have to run fer our lives, fer da wusn't a tree in sight, no whar, fer us to clam up."

And she would tell about the "Injuns,—Marse Hastuns was Captain, or sumpin, of de sojors what fit de Injuns". (Grandfather was Captain of a company of militia). "And when he go to town to muster de men, he come back home so funny. He would hab a dram, he would, but Marse Hastuns nebber did git drunk, No, no, no, he des take a dram, and git funny. And when he get home he tell Mammy Milly, she was the cook, to cook a big pot of mush, and when it git dun, he make her bring it out wid a big pan of sweet milk, and

I (Mrs. Pickett) remember hearing my father, John H. Marks, ("Little Jack,") tell of an incident that happened when he was a boy, at that time the country was unsettled, and a veritable wilderness. Wild animals roamed at will, there were not a dozen farms, in what is now Cleveland County, Arkansas, and each farm had to keep a pack of hounds. Uncle Jackey had one old favorite bear dog, but the old fellow was too aged and feeble to hunt any more, and had the mange in a marked degree. Hound-like he persisted in coming into the house. No matter what company was present, old Rover would be right in their midst, if he could possibly get there, Cousin Rebecca Sorrells, Uncle Jackey's oldest daughter, begged her father to have the old dog killed, but he refused, so once when Cousin Civility Stewart, who afterwards married my father's brother Hastings Marks, was visiting Cousin Rebecca, they planned to get rid of Rover, and securing some strychnine, they gave him a dose. A few minutes after they started over to grandmother's, going through the field because it was nearer, just as they were passing a cotton house, they heard a noise and looking back saw old Rover coming after them, staggering along with his tongue out, his mouth filled with froth and saliva. They thought the poison had run him mad and they became panic stricken, screaming loudly for help, they ran into a cotton house, and climbed the walls as high as they could go. In the meantime, my father, who was also on his way to Uncle Jackey's heard their cries, and hurried to them. When he was told by them of the poison, and saw the condition of the dog, he shot him. The girls decided that they would never give a pet strychnine, if it came into the house and occupied the bed.

The most of my childhood, from the time I was five years of age until I was thirteen, was spent in school, first in the little village school of Chambersville, Ark., then the Collegiate Institute, of Camden, Ark. When the Civil War began, that stopped my schooling, but my father taught me, during all the spare moments I had from my spinning and weaving. At that time every one had to spin and weave. The rich as well as the poor had to make everything that was worn on the body, and used in the house. Plough lines, and even woven saddle girths, from the long hair of the tails of horses and cattle. We made our hats of the Southern Palm or Palmetto, that grew in the swamps, and they were as beautiful as the expensive leghorns of today.

Yet during all those troublous times, and with so much work to do, there were times when we were right jolly, and some laughable things would occur, although at the time, it was considered quite serious. Once after the Federals had taken possession of Pine Bluff, Arkansas, a bunch of my girl friends were spending the day with me, and my Uncle Evan P. Marks had gone home to see his mother, who was an invalid. That morning a runner came telling him he had better leave, that the Federals were at Mount Elba only six miles away. So he left, fearing that he might be taken a prisoner, and came across the Moro Creek to our house, in Calhoun County. In the afternoon we were having a fine time, in the parlor, dancing, singing, etc. There being only two of the male sex present, Uncle Evan and Brother Billie, some of the girls tied handkerchiefs to their arms to act as gentlemen. Uncle Evan being a fine violinist played for us, prompted and danced all at the same time. And while the dancing and fun was in full sway, old black Mammy came running into the room. Exclaiming, "Fer de Lord's sake run, Marse Evan, de Yankees is coming right down the road, en ef you don run da git you sho' ". Looking out of the window there they were, as we thought, a whole regiment of Feds. There was only one way for Uncle Evan to get out of the room, and that was through the hall, in plain view of the soldiers. He had kept his horse tied and saddled in the back yard, for fear that he might have to leave in a hurry. So he made a dash through the hall to his horse, and out through the plum orchard, that had grown up so thick that one could hardly walk through it, making his horse jump the fences. He had taken off his cartridge belt and pistols, so that he could dance, and in the excitement he had left them on the table. Missing them he did not know what to do. He could not go back to certain capture. Just at this time he saw my father in the orchard and called him to get them as quickly as he could, and send them to him. But by the time Pa got there the soldiers had drawn up in front of the house. When lo and behold! it proved to be our men, led by Colonel McMurtree, who had been on a scout, to find out where the Feds were. We sent for Uncle Evan to come back to the house. Such a laugh as we had, but it broke up our dance.

But times were growing serious, the Colonel said the Feds not only had Pine Bluff, but Little Rock and Camden, also. And that our troops were somewhere in Louisiana, and that they must be off the next morning. Uncle Evan went with them. We heard no more from them for many days. In fact, not until the night before the battle of Mark's Mill, which was fought on April 25th, 1864. General

Steele commanding the Federal Troops, had decided to evacuate Camden, and sending part of his men up the road, towards Little Rock, he started the rest under General Drake, to Pine Bluff.

Later in the afternoon of the 24th of April, one of our old Negroes who had been to preaching in the little village of Chambersville, came back in a great hurry, and terribly excited, saying: "Marse John, you better git out and hide somewhar, fer de Yankees is coming. And da sho' will take you, fer de whole world is full of dem. Da stopped to camp at Chambersville, but are scattering out all over the country, taking all the cotton they can find baled up."

Of course we were terribly uneasy, and did not sleep any that night, expecting the Federals every minute. Just about midnight someone called at the gate, my father went to the door thinking it was the Feds. He called, "Who are you"? The reply was, "are there any Yankees here"? Father said he had heard only later that afternoon, that there were plenty of them at Chambersville. The man then asked, "are there any here at your house"? "Not unless you are one", said my father. The gate being open the man rode up near the door, and speaking very low, in his natural voice said, "How do you do Jack"? Father cried out in a surprised voice, and said, "Dick what are you doing here"? It proved to be one of our neighbors, Mr. Dick Cone. Who had been sent as a scout to find right where the Federals were camped; how many, and all about them, but said he was going to see his wife before he went back to camp. For our soldiers were camped down on the Pine Bluff and Moro Landing road. He was sure there would be a battle early next morning, and he did not know but he might be killed, and wanted to see his wife and children. His home was within two miles of where the Feds were camped, and it was really dangerous for him to venture so near. He told us to listen, and we would hear the guns next morning. For they would be up where the Princeton and Warren road crossed the Pine Bluff and Moro Landing road, in time to cut the Feds off from Pine Bluff.

Next morning Confederate General Cabell formed his men in line of battle up and down the Pine Bluff road. General Fagan's line was from the Pine Bluff road out west, parallel with the Princeton road, up which the Federal Troops would come. Gen. Cabell ordered Gen. Shelby to take his men around through the country, and come into the Pine Bluff road, near the Mount Elba crossing on the Saline River. And to take my uncle, Lt. Evan P. Marks as a guide. All this was done very early in the morning. And so quietly that the people knew nothing of what was going on, until the battle began.

In the mean time, the Federal pickets that had been stationed at Mount Elba, through the night, had been exchanged and sent on down the road to meet the command, but instead they had stopped at my grandmother's, Mrs. Civility Marks, and were plundering the house, looking for money and anything of value, which they could carry with them. An old lady, "Aunt Luke Williams", was standing by a table busily cutting garments for the Negroes, when one of the Feds came up to her, took hold of the shears, and told her to turn them loose. She snatched them from him, and said, "Rot your soul", if you do not leave me alone, I'll stab you to the heart," he drew back and said, "I believe you would". Just then Cousin George Stewart, who was an invalid, and living with Grandmother, heard a rumbling, and on looking out saw General Shelby's men drawn out in line of battle, advancing rapidly. They wore blue coats like the Feds, and thinking they were our enemies, he cried, "Aunt! we are lost, the whole face of the earth is covered with Yankees". But when she looked she saw our flag, and began to clap her hands saying, "Why George! it is our men, don't you see our flag?"

When the Federal pickets heard that they left in a hurry, and made for their horses. All was excitement, and every one ran out. Our men saw the pickets trying to get away, and halted them, but they would not surrender, so they shot one near the house, and the other further down the road. By that time Uncle Evan had reached the gate, but all were so excited, that they did not recognize him until he spoke. He told them to get back into the house, close all of the doors and windows, for there was going to be a battle, and they might be killed. Grandmother hardly thinking what she was saying, said, "Evan, don't go, stay with me". He laughed and said, "why Mother, I wouldn't miss it for anything. Do not be uneasy, we will be sure to whip them, for we will have them surrounded before they know it," and saying good-bye, he was gone. Only a few minutes passed until they heard the guns. The cannons began to jar the earth, and fighting was terrible, but only for a short time.

The Federals found Gen. Cabell in front, and Generals Fagan and Shelby close in behind them, having them completely surrounded. Gen. Drake commanding the Federal troops, was killed early in the action. So they surrendered, army, guns, cannon, wagons, mules, horses and everything. Several hundred Feds were killed and wounded, with only a few Confederate casualties, comparatively. These included few deaths, and about one hundred wounded.

Uncle Evan had some of the wounded Yankees carried from the battlefield to his mother's house. She and I nursed them until they were well and strong enough to be paroled, and sent to their homes. They were Capt. Thomas Penwarden, of Kansas; Lt. St. John and James M. Campbell, of Indiana.

After the battle was over our soldiers pushed right on to overtake Gen. Steel, and cut him off from Little Rock, leaving only one Texas Regiment to look after the prisoners. There was bitter personal feelings between these Confederate Texas troops and Capt.

Penwarden's section of the Union forces, for they were from Kansas. The Texans learned of Capt. Penwarden's being taken to the Marks' house, but as long as they were sure that he would die, they gave the matter little thought. However, when they heard that he was recovering, some of the men stole away from the camp and went to the house, for the purpose of killing him. When they called at the gate, Grandmother asked me to see what they wanted. They at first pretended to want to purchase a saddle that Grandmother had, and I told them it was only a boy's saddle, and had belonged to my young uncle that was dead, and that money could not buy it. They then asked about Capt. Penwarden. When I said that he was recovering as fast as possible, one spoke up and said they would soon put a stop to that, for they had come to kill the "damn Jayhawker". And started to go into the house. I told them they would never take him from the house while I lived. That he was a prisoner, and left in our care, and that it would be most cowardly for them to kill a prisoner. They contended that he was nothing but a "Damn Jayhawker", and that they would kill him. I said, "I am ashamed of you, I never would have believed that we had such low down, cowardly men in our Southern Army. You are not worthy of being called soldiers, and if you do not leave these premises I will certainly report you to Col. Ellitson, as we are expecting him over to take dinner today". On hearing that they left, and we were not troubled with them any more.

One day after Capt. Penwarden was able to walk out in the hall, he was passing an open door of the room where I was spinning. The hum of the wheel aroused his curiosity, for he had never seen anyone spinning. He stopped and asked me what I was doing. I thought that he was poking fun at me because I had to spin. My proud Southern blood rose instantly, and I replied, "I am spinning ropes to hang Yankees with." He laughed heartily, and left me, but after that all of them called me the desperate rebel. Dr. Smith, Federal Surgeon, was left to attend the wounded Northern soldiers.

After all of them recovered they were paroled and sent home. We never saw them any more. But I still hear from them; they have never forgotten us, and try in every way to show their gratitude for the care and protection that we gave them.

I married William Tennell Pickett, September 28, 1869; son of William John Pickett.

REMINISCENCES OF MARTHA HARVIE (MARKS) HUDSON, WIFE OF JAMES MADISON HUDSON, PINE BLUFF, ARKANSAS

My mother, Mary (Barnett) Marks, died when I was two years old. Father took me, with my sisters, Rebecca and Emily, to live with his sister Martha, wife of Judge Owen Kennon, who lived within eight miles of Dalton, Georgia. Half of the house was of rock, with a big basement and finished at the top with lumber. I don't remember whether it was painted or not, but it was considered a fine house. Aunt Martha had magnificent solid mahogany furniture, and we had to rub that furniture until we could see ourselves in it. When we didn't rub furniture, we had to knit a sock of coarse yarn for the Negroes, before we could go to play. Of course that was when I was about six years old.

Uncle Owen Kennan surely was eccentric. He drank a great deal, and swore all of the time, but he was all brains. When Aunt Martha married him, they said she remarked, that she would prove that one person could marry a Kennon and be perfectly happy, but she was not. He apparently was as good to her as could be, but sometimes I would see her in the big lot walking about, studying what to do. She died when I was about six, I think. When she was taken sick, Uncle bought her a fine solid mahogany bed, and tried to make her comfortable, but when a pain came on she would scream for hours at a time. Her trouble, I found later, was cancer.

After Aunt Martha died, Pa came to see us, and seeing that we had no protection except Bettie, the house girl, he brought us back to Arkansas. I was about seven and Em about two years older. On this trip we would go by stage a day or two, and then get on a railroad. They were building a railroad through Georgia and Alabama, and they were giving a trial trip for speed. To me the trees looked like a solid wall, and I asked Sister and Em, why we were walled in like that.

In Alabama we stopped at the foot of Crystal Mountain. I gathered a lot of crystals, which I thought beautiful, but Pa would not let us bring them on. Went down to Mobile, there we took a steamer, and went by Lake Ponchatrain to New Orleans. Pa had shipped his cotton to New Orleans, was the reason we made the trip that way, and he settled up for his cotton. We then came up the Mississippi and Ouachita rivers, to within forty miles of home.

Gov. Gilmer lived in New Orleans, and was my father's cousin. He had asked Pa to bring us there. My father stopped in Mobile with Cousin William Marks and his wife. They had just lost a little girl about my size, so they gave me some of her pretty dresses. They had short sleeves and low neck. In New Orleans, I know Mrs. Gilmer was ashamed of us, as my aunt's health was bad for so long. Father had the mountain girls to make our clothes. I would like to have a picture of how we looked. That night they were having some sort of church affair, and Mrs. Gilmer had the maid to take us up to bed early, but I got into one of those fine dresses, and went about half way down the stairs to watch the dancing. They called each other Brother and Sister, and I remember saying to Em, hasn't she got a heap of brothers and sisters? Uncle Owen did not believe in churches, and would not let us go to them. As soon as Mrs. Gilmer saw us she had the servant take us back to our rooms.

The next day Pa gave us $10.00, saying, "you might see something you want to buy." We did, we saw a candy store, and we gave the man the ten dollars and told him we wanted candy. He sent enough to fill one of our trunks. When we got on the steamboat Pa asked us which trunk we wanted in the state room, and we showed him the candy trunk. So the trunk with all of our clothes was put on deck. We would ask my father for the key, the only other things in that trunk was Mother's jewelry and some of her other keepsakes. In opening it up so often we must have aroused the suspicion of a thief, for before we reached home the trunk was stolen, and we only had the clothes in our other trunk, but we had the candy, or a part of it. The trunk was never recovered.

Long before we went to Georgia, there had been a Cherokee village near Uncle Owen Kennan's place, and he bought up the Cherokee land when the Indians were removed. In front of our house was a big catalpa tree.

The Negroes said when the Indians were banished they would go shake the leaves off the catalpa trees, telling them good-bye. Their one-room huts were still standing there, and how afraid I was of them.

After the Indians left they could not send a Judge there who could hold court, there was so much lawlessness, they would run the Judge out. When Uncle Owen was elected Judge he went to Milledgeville, about twenty-five miles from home to open court. He took along one of the biggest men he had, and a coil of rope. Uncle was a big, tall man, and swore like a trooper. He called court to order, and said, "the first man who opens his mouth, I will swing to a high limb." He held court all around in the district, but decided after two terms that he would resign to look after his large law practice.

Uncle Owen's home near Dalton, Georgia, was not very far from Chattanooga, Tenn. You could sit in the hall, and on each side see a range of mountains six miles off—the Blue Ridge. Uncle Owen was a grand provider, and we had everything we needed. Once when we were living with him and Aunt Martha, Em, or I one, broke a bowl. Uncle went to Milledgeville and had some iron bowls turned out—big, heavy iron bowls, that nearly broke our backs to lift.

Judge Kennan had a very exciting case in Dalton, in July, or August, and in coming home his tongue became paralyzed, and he could never talk plainly after that. Aunt was dead, and we had gone before that happened.

The house girl Bettie, and her husband Robert, who were as trustworthy, as white people, kept house for him. The paralysis did not seem to affect his brain, just his tongue, and I believe God paralyzed his tongue so that he could not swear any more.

The kitchen and dining room were in the rock basement of the house.

Once when we were living there, Uncle had hold of my hand, going with me down the steps to the dining room, and I slipped and fell. He ripped out a lot of oaths, because I was so awkward, ending with, "You little hell-cat."

The next day he was sitting on the fence feeding his hogs, and he slipped off, so I said to him what he had said to me. He went back in the house, and said, "Martha, that is the brightest child I ever knew, I would give a fortune if she was mine, and a boy."

Uncle Owen finally recovered from his paralysis, and his brain was clear, except that he could not say the words he intended to say. When he was first stricken, and they brought him in the room he kept fussing, and they brought him everything they could think of, but none of the things were what he wanted. Finally Bettie thought of his gold, so she brought him that, and put it in the middle of the floor, and he put his foot on it. When I went back to see him, about 1847, he allowed Bettie to keep it in a trunk, but he would not let it be put in a bank. While we were on our visit, Bettie took us up stairs and showed it to us. Your Aunt Rebecca (my sister) had had a large woolen hood made from goods with a draw string to pull it up around the face. That old hood was literally full of just pure gold, $5, $10, and $20, gold pieces, a fortune, loose and unprotected.

He spent his money about like Coal Oil Johnnie, taking a fancy at one time to horses; another, sheep; another, cows, and would later give the things away. He had bolts of fine linen, bolts of jeans and all kinds of fine cloth when we went back. A corner of one room was filled with bowls and pitchers, but he had thrown away his iron bowls. I think he had those iron bowls made at the Georgia Penitentiary. Another time his fad was silver cups and goblets. He would never let a rooster be killed and would go out every evening and feed them, and watch the roosters fight. His state of aphasia was most pitiful. One time he called me to the door, when the cows were being driven up, and said, "Cream, cream." That was as near to cows as he could say, but he could say a good many words, and connect them. He took me in his buggy to invite all the old settlers to dine with him, in our honor, and he said to one old lady, "we are going to kill a fine mule". He laughed, he knew the word was not right, but he seemed to have no control over his tongue. I have forgotten what we did have, but perhaps the fatted calf. He went to one place and called the woman, "Mrs. Peacock," and she didn't like that a bit.

He was good hearted and charitable. Bettie, the house girl, told us he could not bear to see a poor horse. One day an old man hitched his horse at the gate, and went off over the plantation. Uncle called to one of the Negroes, and told him to take that "bag of bones" into the woods, and knock him in the head. When the man returned he wanted to know where his horse was. Uncle gave him to understand, that he was not to hitch such a bag of bones at his gate anymore, and to go to the lot and pick him out a horse.

There was a mountain within three miles of us, and another on the other side of us. The residence was up on one big hill, and on top of a high hill opposite, was a cemetery. At the foot of this hill was a clear stream of water running out from a big rock. This spring was about as far as two city blocks would be from the house, and the little Negroes had to bring the water from this spring. Uncle had two Irishmen working for him, and he wanted the rock blasted away from the spring. When they blasted, it seemed to me that a million little white rocks would come up. The spring branch was lined with walnut trees. Further down the stream was oil floating over the top. Those little Negroes would scare us half to death, telling us it was the grease out of the dead people.

Uncle Owen had taken an ambitious, nice looking, young fellow from the mountains, and educated him to be a lawyer. I believe his name was Stanson. When we reached there, Uncle Owen was just dying for me to marry this lawyer, who lived with him. But he disgusted me making love to me. I think Uncle Owen left his nephews in Georgia everything he had.

Sister Rebecca made several trips from Arkansas to Georgia, coming back every two years to see us. I went to Georgia when I could hardly talk. We lived there six years, and I was about eight when I came back to Arkansas, through New Orleans. I didn't know cursing was wrong, and it was very hard for me to keep from it when I came back home.

My sister Em was married at fifteen, after her son Tom Dansby was born, we made the trip back again to see Uncle Owen, and Brother Billie went with us. We got on a little boat at Pine Bluff, Arkansas, named the Red Wing, I thought it wonderful, but I know

Newspaper Item. Assoc. Press. "The grave of Judge Owen Kennan, eminent Georgia Jurist, buried at Dalton, Ga., more than sixty years ago, was opened on 1, 17, 1921; by ghouls, and the coffin and the contents removed, in search of gold, which was reputed to have been entombed with the Jurist. Judge Kennan was known to be very wealthy and eccentric, and that he kept a large amount of gold coin in his home, with which he delighted to toy, according to old inhabitants. It was common gossip among his old slaves that the money was buried with him. And it is supposed this idea was handed down to the present generation of darkies, some of whom were undoubtedly the grave robbers."

Compiler's note—It is a fact that none of the family ever knew what became of his gold.

now that it was very small. We went to Arkansas Post, and got on the Imperial, that took us to Memphis, Tenn. It was a fine boat, with many glass mirrors in the cabin. We made the rest of the trip by rail. The train scared Tom, and every time it whistled, he would almost have convulsions, so Brother Billie had to cut his vest open and get the padding out to stuff Tom's ears, so that he could not hear. We got along very well after that. I remember the cow catcher was painted red.

I bought a plaid dress once when I walked to Pine Bluff, Ark., during the Civil War, to sell cotton. I was living with Mrs. Dansby, my sister, close to the Saline River, about nineteen miles from Pine Bluff. Mrs. Taliaferro got me to go with her to sell cotton. She would get it from other people, and sell it in Pine Bluff. Cotton, I think, was forty cents a pound. Mrs. Taliaferro was late getting her cotton up and one day after we started it began raining, and was cold. Dark came on and we had not a thing in the world to sleep on. Every one had refugeed, but one old Parson Taylor, who had a one-room house, with a shed room to it. When asked, he replied, "no, you can't stay here."

We had two wagons, a splendid Negro driver for one of them, and Mrs. Taliaferro and I took turns driving and walking. Being very tired, she begged—told him we were alone, and had started to Pine Bluff, but he was firm. He finally said, "about a mile ahead of you is a vacant house, and you can stay in that". She answered, "we have no dry clothes, and nothing to sleep on, will you lend us some quilts"? So he loaned us two quilts, and she asked for a chunk of fire. We found the log house with a big fireplace in it. The Negro found some dry boards, and got a fire started, then he took a little torch and went out to get more wood. Mrs. Taliaferro's mother was sending, by us, a bag of fine Yam potatoes, to Judge Grace's wife (then Mrs. Emily Hudson). We got some hot ashes, filled the fireplace full of potatoes, and never anything tasted so good.

We, afterwards, forgave the old preacher, for we found he was one of the strongest Confederates that ever lived. Every one liked him, and I liked him, too, after I knew him better and found out his principles. He saw that we were taking cotton to sell to the Yankees, and he was so bitter towards us that he would not do us a favor by letting us stay at his house. A cotton buyer by the name of Thorn would meet us at the lines, and buy the cotton, then get us a permit to go into town.

That was the only time I ever camped, and I don't believe that I could do it again. Sometimes I would be almost scared to death, for the Graybacks were everywhere.

But when it came to taking my finery, what little I did have, I would fight for that. Once I had knitted a shawl, had just finished and washed it, and laid it in my trunk. The Yankees dashed through the gate, and into the house, right to that trunk. One grabbed one end, and one the other and I said, "you better let go, if you don't I will bite you", an officer came in then, and said, "give it to her," which of course, he did.

Col. Fish had a big brick store in Pine Bluff. People came from forty miles around to buy. The war had been going on, and I could not buy much, but I had bought a shepherd's plaid, and often I would go to the trunk and look at that dress, (calico at 50c a yard). In the neighborhood were two old maids, big hands, long arms, and they worked in the fields. One day one of them said to Em, "let's see how much she thinks of that dress"? So those old fools dressed up, had army pistols and men's clothes, they came on in, and first went into Em's trunk. As she knew the joke, she took up a chair, and said, "I will knock you down if you touch my things". They then went on to my trunk. I was such a coward that I was trembling from head to foot, but I fought for that dress.

It was said that your Aunt Em, (Mrs. Emily (Marks) Dansby, was the bravest woman in the country, and I reckon she was. The Graybacks who did not belong to the other side, raided the country continually, and we had heard that they were in our neighborhood. I was staying with Em, and we were there alone. "Old Man Matthews" who lived near by was a Union man, and had taken all of our chickens. But his son Billy Matthews, who had served in the Confederate War was home on a furlough, and had said, "Mrs. Dansby, I am going to bring you some chickens". So one dark night he rode up, and said, "I want to stay all night," Em answered, "I am not prepared to have anyone stay all night." He replied, "I will stay anyway". Em kept a double barrel shot gun at the head of her bed, she grabbed this, threw up her window, and said, "I will show you if you do". I was the biggest coward that ever lived, and I felt sure that this Grayback would kill us. But he called in a hurry, "don't shoot, it is only Billy with the chickens". I will never be as happy when I get to heaven as I was to hear his voice. He came in explaining, "I have heard you were the bravest woman in the State, and I wanted to see just how brave you were.

The Graybacks had stolen two fine mules from your Aunt Em, just a few days before this. She said to them, "you can take them, but I hope old Shelby gets you before you get to Camden." And in a week's time he did, and she got her mules back. The Graybacks were captured right in front of our house. Gen. Shelby was from Missouri. My brother William Marks, had fought in Mississippi, and was shot in the arm. Leader injured, so was home and in the battle of Mark's Mill. This was the site of a big flour mill, owned by my father.

The battle of Mark's Mill was fought one mile from our house. I saw them shoot down the driver of the first wagon in front of our house. Gen. Steel was coming from Little Rock to invade Texas, and Gen. Stephens sent two hundred wagons of supplies to Camden. They camped at our house, took possession of the yard, knocked the palings off to make fires, killed the chickens, etc. Two old rich men had sons in the Northern Army, and had come through to see them, they sat on the porch and laughed and said, "aren't the boys having a great time." Just a week from that day one of the old men came back, heart broken, with the body of his son.

At the time of the battle of Mark's Mill, those 200 wagons unloaded, were returning from Camden, the renegades had robbed all along from Camden, so the wagons were full.

Father never locked his back door—you pulled a string on the latch. Just before day I heard that latch click, and I knew old Duke, the Negro who made the fires had gone to join the Federals, and wasn't there, but it turned out to be my brother Billy, who had come from the soldier's camp, to ask my father where the troops were. Telling him that the Confederates would take the wagons.

My father had told the Negroes, the week before, "I can not support you, the country is overrun, and you can take the wagons, and go." Most of them loaded up the wagons, and went as far as Saline River, then came back, and said, "Marse Jack, these Yankees can't support us, and we have come back home again." We learned later that the Yankees had advised them to return. And then they came back from Camden with the wagons, to strip the place, take the plows, and farming implements, everything they could. The battle was fought Sunday morning. Saturday night there was such hammering in the quarters; they were ready to leave. A good many of the 200 wagons had passed before General Fagan attacked them. They had six and eight fine mules to each wagon, the battle was short, but fierce. There were 1000 men with the wagons, and Generals Shelby and Marmaduke had 4000 men. I could stand on the front porch of our house and look down the road and see the soldiers. Shelby had said the Yankees had burned his home in Missouri, and he was desperate. He had killed so many men, that he had clothed his men in Yankee clothes.

After the battle one man said to me, "come out and get some things in the wagons,"another said, "don't you want a Negro baby? We have killed his mother, and we don't want him." Another man brought in four nice quilts, and I said, "I do not want them, they do not belong to me." But I kept them to see if I could find the owners. And the very next day a woman came and said one was her grandmother's quilt. I was so in love with it, that I bought it from her. It was quilted in a raised pattern of vines.

Our home was a temporary hospital, and I can see now, the wounded and dying, lying on our porches and in the house. General Sherman was right about war, it is h . . . .

Mrs. Frazier lived close to my father. She had a large home and fine servants. One time she was giving a house party, and I was one of the guests. She had a big gobbler and other good things for dinner, and we were ready to sit down at the table, when we looked down the road, the whole earth seemed full of blue coats. They always put spur to their horses when they came in sight of a house, to keep anyone there from escaping. Gen. C———— and officers dashed in, sat down, and brought the Negroes to the table, just to tease Mrs. Frazier. She was furious, and said, "make those Negroes get up from my table." She would have said more, but we gathered around her, begged her to hush, or they would burn the house down, that quieted her, and they soon cleaned up everything on the table. After they had eaten, they came in and sat down without being invited. Gen. C. (must have been Gen. Powell Clayton) said, "why don't you come to Pine Bluff?" I answered, "because you won't let us". He said, "come up and send your names to headquarters, and I will let you in." He kept his word, and when we rode up on the old horses they had left us, in place of our fine ones; gave our names to the picket, Gen. C. sent word to pass us in. The picket was stationed about where Gen. R. M. Knox's house is on West 6th ave— and the home of Mrs. Charles F. Moore, 702 W. 2nd, one story then, was his headquarters.

Jake Fies lived in Pine Bluff, and had a livery stable. Jake was glad to see us, and so was Mrs. Fies. We stayed two or three days with them, and when we left every rib of my hoop skirt was tied with packages. As we were afraid the Graybacks would get after us, we pulled up the hoops, and made them fit as we rode sideways. When I got down off the "old bag of bones," I could hardly walk. The Federals had taken all of our fine horses except a dark bay, with a wart.

When I was staying with Em, we would try different places to hide things. Once we tore up the ceiling up stairs, and placed everything of value in the attic. Sometimes we would get up the silver, jewelry, etc., the moon would be shining, and we would go a distance out in the woods, dig a hole and sink a crock and bury it. Then when we got back to the house we would say, "suppose a Negro running away to Pine Bluff had seen us," and we would go back and get that silver. Em's first child, little Lucy had died, and her tombstone was a vault, and one dark night we slipped back the door, and put the valuables in there.

The Yankees would come in and go through things faster than you could tell it. Mr. Hagan had the only mill—outside of father's, in the country to grind wheat, and they made a raid, and set fire to that mill. We could see it, and then they dashed on to our house, threw the gates open, and came charging in with sticks in their hands. Em and I were there by ourselves, with the children, Tom and the little girl. We thought that they would set the house on fire, but they didn't they were after chickens.

Em, by this time had become a widow, and she sent her Negroes to Texas to protect them. Dr. Barnett had refugeed, and given my sister permission to move into his home. We had sent away everything that we thought the Yankees could want.

Tom Dansby, Sr., (Em's first husband), belonged to the patrol, to go from farm to farm, to see what the Negroes were doing, and keep them from running away. One night when I was staying with Em, your Aunt Becky, (Mrs. T. F. Sorrells) spent the night there, too, on her way refugeeing to Texas. Em's mother-in-law, Mrs. Betsy Dansby, was also there, and Tom Dansby, Sr., had gone on patrol. There was a big window in the sitting room, and someone said, "there comes Tom now, I see the fire pan." We all then went out on the gallery, it was a log house with a hall between the rooms, and right along by the steps was a light that rolled along, and then disappeared. I saw it and thought it was a white chicken, but did not say anything, and we went back into the house. Tom did not come, and we concluded that someone with a lantern had flashed it on us to see who was there. Aunt Betsy Dansby did not see the light, but could not get it off her mind. So one summer night when we were sitting on the gallery, she said, "Em, I would have given anything in the world to have seen that light." Just as she said that, it came out from under the steps, and rolled out the gate . . . . Now what was it?

My father (John Harvie Marks, II), went to Union County, across the Ouachita River, rented a nice farm there, made about two crops, and liked it very much.

In weaving we used a pattern to indicate the way we wanted the cloth, for fancy cloth, we had so many treadles that it was hard to do. My mother had a spinning wheel, or machine, that took two Negroes—one to put the cotton on, and the other to turn it. After the war, your father, my husband Jas. Madison Hudson, belonged to the Ku Klux Klan, and they patrolled the country to make the Negroes behave.

Signed,
Mrs. Martha Marks Hudson.

"I am treasuring a set of heavy silver forks. I don't know exactly how old they are, but my grandparents brought them from Louisiana to Alabama. And they were made from silver dollars.

They are indeed beautiful. Grandfather Nicholas Meriwether Marks had them made for my grandmother, over one hundred years ago, before they left Virginia. The initials are those of my grandmother Rebecca M. Marks. I also have a set of six teaspoons, that came down to me the same way, and they are beautiful and heavy.

The Albemarle Declaration of Independence shows the following names allied to the Marks family, James Marks, Peter Marks, John Harvie, Richard Harvie, Thomas Jefferson, William Lewis, Samuel Taliaferro, Richard Gaines, John Henderson, Sr., Hiram Gaines, William McGehee, Francis Taliaferro, and others. During the early days of the struggle for independence the patriots of different sections of the country found great difficulty in corresponding with each other, and they established a secret means of inter-communication by private letter carriers.

Dr. Gilmer secured subscriptions toward postal carriers. A few of the subscribers were Peter Marks, John Harvie, Richard Harvie, and J. S. Marks. "Our first Military Company, Albemarle County, Virginia, Independents-Volunteers, John Marks, Lieut. John Harvie, Ensign James Marks". James Marks probably served with Augusta County Troops, in Virginia, it is certain that at times he went out under Gen. George Matthews, of Augusta County, Virginia.

James Marks was an early settler of Wilkes County, Ga. He built Asbury Chapel, a Methodist Church, on Broad river, near Goosepond settlement, and his home was the meeting place of the first conference of the Methodist Church, probably ever held in Georgia. Hastings—Hastings is a name older than the Norman Conquest, 1066, for the Castle of Hastings was held by that family when William the Conqueror landed. And the land in the region of which the Battle of Hastings was fought, was in the possession of the family before 871.

The first of the family to be elevated to the peerage, was Lord Henry Hastings, s. of Wm. de Hastings, Steward of Henry II, 1154-1189. This office of Steward being hereditary in the family. The Hastings through marriage, became allied with the royal families of England, Scotland, and France, tracing in direct lines to Charles Martel, Duke of Antrim, A.D., 732, the grandfather of Charlemagne. They also trace directly to Alfred the Great, Wm. the Conqueror, David, Kg. of Scotland, Henry, Kg. of France, and his wife Anne of Russia.

George, the 3rd Lord Hastings, was created E. of Huntingdon, 1529, and married the daughter of David, Kg. of Scotland. Refs.; Daughters American Revolution Mag. V. LVI—p. 221. (Apr. 1922).

BENNETT

SAMUEL BENNETT AND WIFE JOANE OF VIRGINIA

Samuel Bennett, born 1582-3, came to Virginia 1622, in the Providence, his wife Joane came with him. Samuel Bennett was living in Elizabeth City, County, Virginia, 4, 12, 1633; it is probable that he died in a few years after that date, for we find that "Joane Bennett, widow, was granted land, for the transportation of persons into the Colony, May 6, 1636.*"

Recorded in York County, Virginia, are "sundry affidavits", dated 1661, in which affiants state that they were present December 11, 1644; and saw Hannah Bennett, dr. of Samuel Bennett. marry Abraham Turner, this ceremony was performed by Parson Cluverias, late Minister of Hampton Parish. After Mr. Turner's death, 1648 she married Humphrey Tomkins, probably in a few months, or at least a few years, although some authorities give the date of her second marriage as Dec. 22, 1661. Humphrey Tomkins died 1679; at the time of his death he had 2171 acres on North River, joining William Debnam.

There is a division of opinion concerning the marriage date of Mrs. Hannah (Bennett) Turner and Humphrey Tomkins, but it is said that the marriage is on record in York County, Virginia, Pocoson Parish, what date is recorded there is not known to the compiler, but it is very probable that this second marriage took place before the dates given above.

Samuel Bennett in 1636, had land on New Pocoson, York County, adjoining Augustine Warner, Lt. William Worlitch and Gilbert Symons. The estate of Abraham Turner was settled by Mordecai Cooke and Augustine Warner. William Debnam died 1658; will probated by his widow Catherine, in Gloucester County, Va., 1658; she married second, Rev. Charles Grymes, who died 1662, Gloucester County, Va. She was his executrix, in Gloucester County.

One authority gives the names of the children of Humphrey Tomkins, and Mrs. Hannah (Bennett) Turner, of Gloucester Co., Va. line traced in Tomkins sketch.

EUBANKS—EWBANKS

The Eubanks family was of English extraction, and in England the name was spelled Ewbank. Members of the family came across the seas to America, in early days and located on the south side of the Rappahannock River, in Virginia. Others settled in Maryland, in the 17th century, and are said to have had a crown grant.

The family is listed in Hotten's Immigrants, as early as Oct. 13, 1635; the date upon which William Eubank, aged 20, aboard the Amitie came from London Port, to Virginia. Greer's Virginia Immigrants gives us the name of Henry Eubank, who came to Virginia with Col. Wm. Claiborne, in 1653; there were other pioneers of an early date.

Two branches of the Eubanks family lived along the south fork of the Hardware River, from the earliest times. There were also prominent representatives of the family in Essex County, Virginia, to which county they came in the early settlement of the Colony. Their descendants became rather numerous in that section, and numbers of them moved westward from time to time, as the country developed. One branch of the family lived in Amherst County, Virginia; another in Richmond, Va. The Essex Co., Eubanks, or Ewbanks, intermarried, and became allied with the Montagues, Willards, Harrisons, and other well known families of the county.

There are Eubanks—Ewbanks, living in almost every state in the Union, but little has ever been written of them, and the name has been very hard to trace. Wherever they have been found, they were noted for their education, culture, and refinement.

Before the Revolution we find that Emily (Amelia) Eubanks, married Humphrey Tomkins (Tompkins) of Georgia, it is not known whether the marriage took place in Virginia, or Georgia, but it is an established fact that both traced their ancestry to Virginia. This line will be treated further through the Tomkins Family —Humphrey Tomkins, of Georgia.

TOMKINS

Tomkins was one of the old and leading families in Virginia and the eastern States, in Colonial days. Whether you are a Thomkins, Tompkins or Tomkins, it is one, and the same name, originally Thomas. The name has its variations, Tompkins, Thomkins, Thompkin, Tompkins, Tomkyns, Thompkyns, Tomkinson, Tompkinson, Tomkies, Tomkys, etc.

Many English surnames have the terminations of "kin", these being diminutives of forenames, as Tomkin, Tomkins (little Tom). And no matter which form of spelling has descended to you by birthright, you can trace to the Tomkins, or Tompkins, of England and Wales.

Sir Hugh Treherne is claimed by the Welsh branch, as their founder, or rather as the founder of the Thomas Family. He was a valiant Knight, with the Black Prince at Portiers. In Yorkshire, England, one Mr. Tompkins, Gent., of Holborn, lost his life in this Sovereign's cause. He was thought to have been Nathaniel Tompkins; on June 30, 1643, he was brought to trial, upon the charge of conspiring with the followers of Charles I, against the Parliament of England. For his loyalty to his King, he made the supreme sacrifice, and was beheaded, his speech, and the particulars of his trial, have been preserved.

We have been told that the Tompkins family were noted for their musical talent, and that they numbered more musicians than any other family in England. As early as 1625, Thomas Tomkins was organist of the Chapel Royal, and was a composer of many songs. The manuscript of some of them being preserved in the British Museum. Indeed the Tomkins seemed gifted in other fine arts. William Tomkins was an artist, and his son Peltro was a portrait painter to George III, and art instructor to the Princess.

We find the name in Virginia as early as 1635; when John Tomkins, aged 25 years, embarked in the Paule, of London, for Virginia, July 1635; Ralph Tomkins (husb.) aged 50 years, left London, aboard the Truelove, bound for Virginia shores, 9, 19, 1635. With him came Uxor (wife) Kate, ae. 58, Elizabeth ae. 18, Marie ae. 14, Samuel ae. 22 years. (Hotten's Immigrants).

Henry Tomkins, came to Virginia, 1652; by Nicho Jernan, Gloucester Co., Va. Humphrey Tomkins, came 1652, to same county, with Capt. Francis Morgan and Ralph Green. And it is to his branch of the family, that we will turn our especial attention.

The Tompkins (Tomkins) prominent in Virginia History, were loved and honored for their culture and refinement, their integrity, their love of liberty, and of justice. And we are told that the women were noted for their beauty, grace, and polished manners, the men for their education, wealth, bravery and courage.

From Fairbairn's Crests, we take the following;

Crests———Tomkins, Eng., out of a ducal coronet, a broken battle axe, all ppr. Pl. 24. cr. 15 (Coronet; same plate, cr. 10).

Tomkins, Heref., a lion, rampant, or holding a broken tilting-spear, ar. Pl. 22. cr. 15, (Spear, pl. 60. cr. 4.)

Tompkins. Eng., a ship, under sail, ppr. Pl. 109, cr. 8.

Tompkins, Heref., a unicorn's head, erased, per fess, ar. and or, armed and maned, gold, (gorged with a laurel wreath, vert) Pl. 67, cr. 1.)

Arms— Tompkins., azure, on a chevron, between three Moor Cocks, close or as many cross-crosslets sable. This belongs to the Sussex England Tompkins.

Note—"The ship would point to some distinguished expedition by Sea, by which the first bearer of the Arms had become noted.

TOMKINS

HUMPHREY TOMKINS, OF GLOUCESTER COUNTY, VIRGINIA

Humphrey Tomkins was an early settler of Pocoson Parish, York County, Virginia. He was probably the immigrant Humphrey Tomkins, who came to Gloucester County, Virginia, in 1652, or about, with Capt. Francis Morgan, and Ralph Green.

We find that Humphrey Tomkins, m. Hannah Bennett, dr. of Samuel Bennett. Her first husband was Abraham Turner, whom she married 12, 11, 1644; he died 1648; and her marriage to Humphrey Tomkins probably occurred very soon after, a few months perhaps. Judging from the records it was before 1649, just how many months, we are not able to calculate definitely. Humphrey Tomkins d. 1679. His marriage is said to be on record in York County. Pocoson Parish Register. (Note—The compiler has not been able to secure a copy of his marriage record.)

Humphrey Tomkins and John Tomkins took up land in Virginia, soon after 1653; Gloucester County Records. Humphrey was a Vestryman, of Kingston Parish, Matthews County, Va. (Meade's Va. Families) and was a land owner of some note, when he died 1679. His sons William, Humphrey and John received land grant, 217½ acres, for their father's grant. Gloucester County, Va. (Va. County Records. V. 9). Later we find a record of 2171 acres "now hired", by his sons, William, Humphrey, and John Tomkins. In 1682 Bennett Tomkins was assessed for 695? acres. Hannah Tomkins, 100 a., William Tomkins 100 a. (Rich'd Times Despatch, 11, 27, 1911).

The Tomkins family occupied their family estate, just after 1654, Gloucester County, Va., this country seat "Goshen", was in Colonial times, one of the handsomest in all Virginia, a large two story building on the banks of a beautiful stream. One of the historic old homes, that has given Virginia the credit for its hospitality and chivalry. The picture of this residence may be found in Journal American History. V. 3.

Note—The line is broken here and although there are numerous records of the Tomkins, we do not find this branch, or what we suppose to be this branch again until abt. 1780; when one Humphrey Tomkins and his wf. Emily Eubanks are found in Georgia. It is not definitely known, from which of the children of Humphrey^1 Tomkins, he traced his descent, but the duplication of the unusual name of Humphrey, leads us to suppose that there was a direct lineage, leading back to Humphrey^1 Tomkins, the immigrant, of Gloucester County, Virginia, 1652. The records of three, possibly four generations have been left unrecorded, and thereby much valuable history has been lost.

A home of the family, in first estates of "Hereditary Americans", was Goshen. And it is described as the seat of the Tompkins, in historic old Gloucester County, Va. Its stately halls have echoed to the foot-fall of men whose historical records, have added to the fame and glamor of the old Dominion.

We find that one Humphrey Tompkyns, was witness to a will, of Dr. Thomas Wotton, of London. Dated 3, 15, 1635. Will was probated 4, 28, 1638. (See Hills of Wilkes County, Ga., by Hill, p. 273.)

The Tompkins were prominent members of St. Margaret's Church, Caroline Co., Va., about, or after, 1727; see Meades' Virginia Families, etc.

Agnes Tompkins, daughter of Giles Tompkins, married Nicholas Hamner. He died soon after 1794; in Albemarle County, Va. They had issue: 1. Susan, m. John L. Cobb, of Bedford; Nicholas Hamner, m. Mary, dr. of Edward Garland; 3. Edmund Hamner, married Charlotte, daughter of Manoah Clarkson; 4. James Hamner, married Isabel Maxwell; 5. Elizabeth Hamner, m.——Scruggs, of Buckingham; 6. Nancy, m.———Childress; others, see Wood's Hist. Albemarle Co., Va.

Thomas Tomkins, 1754, appointed a Commissioner of a town to be laid out on the south side of the Pee Dee River, to be known as Gloucester, N. C.; he was also appointed Treasurer. See N. C. Booklet, V. 13.

HUMPHREY TOMKINS, OF GEORGIA

Humphrey[1] Tomkins, was born in Virginia, married Amelia (Emily) Eubanks of a well known family of Virginia. They had lived in, or near Charlottesville for many years, figuring prominently in the history of both, Augusta and Albemarle Counties. He was married in Albemarle County, during the Revolutionary period, and soon after, with his wife, in company with his neighbors and relatives, the Matthews, Gilmers, Marks, etc., moved to Goose Pond settlement on Broad River, Georgia.

We find that Humphrey Tomkins, received his land warrant for service during the latter part of the Revolution, for Military, or Civil Service, in Georgia. His name appears on p. 640, line 2, of Georgia and Georgia People,—Smith; on the Land Warrant List, as a Soldier of the Line. The list is said to include the names of those certified to by some officer of the Army, as having rendered military service.

One Giles Tompkins purchased land, 1765, on Totier Creek, in Albemarle Co., Va.; d. 1795; leaving three children, William, Elizabeth and Sarah; William d. 1824; his wife's name was Elizabeth; Issue, 1. The name of Giles was popular in both the Tomkins and Eubanks families, as a given name. We have not discovered a connection with any Giles family, but until the present time, the name is in frequent use.

*There is some confusion as to whether Nicholas Tomkins was the son of Humphrey Tomkins; it has been given to us that he was, and that he was not, information in both cases, coming from elderly members of the family.

Mrs. Emily Eubank (Tomkins) Wright, wife of Benjamin Harvie Wright, (see next page), was the last of the children of Nicholas Tompkins (Tomkins). She was living 1909, Newnan, Ga., and it is said that there never lived five lovelier and more useful women, than the daughters of Nicholas Tomkins. Their lives were full of noble deeds, and many there are now that call them blessed.

CARGILE

The name Cargile is known to be a corruption of Cargyle, said to have been derived from the Scottish Argyle, the family being of Scottish Highland origin.

The history of this family is that of rugged, determined men and women. It begins in South Carolina, with an old ancestor, who with his bride cleared land in the daytime, and burned brush at night to get their land ready for cultivation.

John[1] Cargile, with whom we begin this record, was born, 1719; married Catherine Runno (Reneau, another variation,) in Virginia; 1746; died in Greene Co., Georgia, 1785. She was born 1726; d. 1784, 1774? They made their first home in South Carolina, but evidently moved to Georgia, as they are found in that state, the latter part of the decade 1780-90. He had land given him for Revolutionary service, and his name appears in a list of Soldiers. (See old histories of Georgia). They lived in the Goose Pond settlement, Broad river, Elbert Co., Ga., when they died they had one hundred slaves. Had issue;

The name Runno, or Runo, has been so spelled for more than a century, but has been understood to have had a different form in France, and for a time in America. Reneau being the form used by some members of the family, who prefer to revert to the usage of earlier times, but of this there is no definite proof. A Huguenot history is ascribed to the family who are said to have come promptly, following the Edict of Nantes, settled probably around Charleston and Savannah, Ga. (Mrs. B. S. Foster.)

John Runno Cargile, who in 1817, married Mary Hastings Marks, was a Georgia State Senator. Their home was in Butts County, Georgia. He died at the age of forty-two, and left his wife with a large family and numerous slaves. She managed the affairs so well that at her death they were all well provided for. Her family and friends could testify that she was a fine business woman. She might be held up to the modern young woman, as a person who never gave up. Some instances of her business ability are shown in the stories told by her son, of how she required her boys and slaves to pick the seed from cotton, to fill their shoes with lint cotton before they retired at night*. She also kept a box of sugar by her side at the table, and measured out the amount each was to have, and then locked it up.Economy was her watch word. Her servants all had their tasks laid out and they performed them. Her children had their tasks, also, and were not allowed to shirk them.

Their son Charles[4] Cargile, moved to Arkansas 1854, and settled in Okolona, Clark Co. He was a leader in his community, and had large land holdings, which he had cleared and cultivated by his slaves, and was on his way to real wealth when the Civil War came with its devastating effects. Immediately after the war his wife and infant child died, and left him with four boys to care for. He was father and mother both to his boys, and struggled along as best he could until his second marriage to Mrs. Anna E. (Jones) McClure. After their marriage, things began to improve, and they reared the four sons and her daughter, Kate McClure into an outstanding family of Clark County. Honesty, sobriety, and loyalty, to the laws of the land were instilled into them, and they have lived to reflect credit on their name.

Charles Hastings^5 Cargile was a real physician and surgeon, and many of the citizens of Arkansas owe it to him that they are alive today. He was more than generous to all suffering mankind that he came in contact with. All who knew and understood him honored him for his noble life. He reared a family of four fine sons and daughters.

John Stark[5] Cargile was the most troublesome one of Charles' sons to get started off; but when he got started nothing could hold him back. He was married the first time at 26, and was earning the sum of two dollars a day for himself and team. He would take a load of cotton to a certain town in Arkansas, and if fortune favored him he would return with a load of goods for his father's store, thereby making four dollars a day, but these days were few. He worked at anything he could find to do, and in a short time was a small merchant. When he was about thirty-four, the lumber business attracted his attention, and he entered that business and after many years of unremitting toil was on the way to prosperity. He found his talent in directing the large saw mills in South Arkansas and Louisiana. His health became poor after eighteen years in this business, and he sold out his interest in the lumber business.

He has been interested since then in banking, farming, and other interests. A born leader. His efforts have been crowned with success. In 1932, he became interested in the campaign of the present Governor, and became so enthusiastic over his economy program that he did his utmost to get him elected. After Governor Futrell took over the reins of Government he appointed five Highway Commissioners, and they elected J. S. Cargile Chairman of the Commission. Mr. Cargile has been able to provide for a large family who are doing their part to keep the Cargile standard high.

Henry Augustus Cargile is the bachelor of the family. He has had the farm his father gave him on which he has expended his talents, and is a credit to his rearing.

Not one of the four Cargile brothers ever drank intoxicating liquors, and they have always been truthful and faithful to their trusts. No truer men have ever lived than these four grandsons of Mary Hastings Marks.

Their sons are all holding places of trusts in their respective communities, and their children are being given the education and training that makes for good citizenship.

W. R. Cargile, another of the four sons of Charles Cargile, was an honorable, chivalrous and fine man. He was murdered in an attempt to uphold the law. His three sons are a credit to their father's wise teachings; his daughter is one of the finest.

The Marks-Harvie families were among the Virginia Colonists, who removed to Georgia immediately after the Revolution. Having gone in the Matthews-Gilmer company, and having settled on Broad River, Goose Pond, Wilkes County, Georgia, in that part which later became Oglethorpe County.

Mary Hastings Marks and John Runno Cargile, lived in Butts County, Georgia. Their son Charles Cargile married Catherine Grey Smith; she was born 12, 14, 1832. Their children were Wyatt Runno Cargile, b. 9, 22, 1851; Charles Hastings Cargile, b. 4, 21, 1853;

John Stark Cargile, b. 11, 1, 1856; Henry Augustus Cargile, b. 6, 15, 1859; Jefferson Cargile, b. 8, 8, 1862. d. y.

James Marks, brother of Mary Hastings Marks and a bachelor of wealth, offered to give any of his nieces and nephews who would come to Arkansas 160 a. of land, if they would settle on it and develop it. Charles Cargile and his nephew Charles Stark, came to Okolona and developed their land.

Charles Cargile, Representative 1860-2, from Clark County, Ark. a prominent citizen of Okolona, Ark. His parents and grandparents were Georgians, his father died in that state 1834. His mother afterward moved to Louisiana, and died at the home of her son Charles, while on a visit to him in 1857. The father John R. Cargile was a member of Georgia Legislature for many years. He was the son of Charles Cargile, who died in Jasper Co., Ga., 1850. His wife Catherine Grey Smith, was the daughter of W. R. Smith and his wife Rockie A. Smith, died Okolona, Ark. Charles Cargile, married second, Mrs. Anna E. McClure, who was born in North Carolina. Mr. Cargile was a writer of prose and poetry, and was a contributor to some of the leading newspapers of the country. (Arkansas History S. W. p. 130). When Charles Cargile was four years old his parents moved across Ocmulgee river, only about a mile to Butts County, Ga., where he lived until 1854; then moving to Bozier Parish, La., where for a few months he supervised the business of his uncle James Marks, that is—farms and Negroes, while the latter was absent in Alabama and Georgia. After James Marks' return, Capt. Cargile moved to Clark County, Ark. and settled on a tract of land given him by said uncle. At the same time he bought several thousand acres in the same township from his uncle and his partner, Mr. Jordan. I think this was the name, the firm being Jordan and

Charles Cargile—From Obituary

Charles Cargile was born in Jasper County. Georgia, Dec. 28, 1822, died at Okolona, Arkansas, 11, 6, 1908. When three years of age he moved with his parents to Butts County, Ga., where he lived until 1854, when he moved to Clark County, Ark., there he spent the remainder of his life excepting a short period which was spent in Texas, during the war. He married Catherine Grey Smith, in Georgia, Dec. 24, 1850. They became the parents of five children, four of whom survived him, viz.; Dr. Charles Hastings Cargile, of Bentonville, Ark., John Stark Cargile, of Arkadelphia, Ark., W. Runno Cargile, and Augustus H. Cargile of Okolona, Ark. Mrs. Cargile died Aug. 11, 1865, and he married second, in 1867; Mrs. Anna McClure, who preceded him into eternity by a few years.

The subject of this sketch joined the Baptist Church, when quite a young man, while he was living in Georgia. He continued in that faith until his death, which occurred Friday, November 6, 1908.

He was a pioneer, a statesman, generous to a fault, kindly, loyal, and one of the best known men in the county. He was an industrious student, and an untiring worker, progressive and enterprising. He did big things, had convictions and adhered to them tenaciously. He had moral courage.

From Mrs. B. S. F.—My Great Aunt Susan Tompkins Cargile, Mrs. Moore of Georgia, sister of Chas. Cargile, of Okolona, Ark. wrote me in 1895; I have heard mother, (Mary Marks) talk a great deal about her early life, how they lived and enjoyed themselves. What work they had to do, and the first cotton seed she ever saw; how they raised it in the front yard at grandmother's, (Mrs. John H. Marks). I have a rolling pin made by my grandfather Marks, (John H.), that has been in use ever since. First my grandmother used it, then my mother until 1851, when she gave it to me. Grandfather also made for his wife Susan, (Tompkins) Marks, a spinning wheel to spin cotton with, or a spinning jenny, or ginny, as they called it then. It would gin the cotton, card it, and spin it. I have seen it. It stayed here in the old Cargile homestead, Butts Co., Ga., until I was grown, before it was destroyed. When mother broke up housekeeping she left her flax wheel and the spinning jinny in the lumber room. When I had the house remodeled I threw them away.

*Uncle Jim Marks within my own recollection, certainly owned considerable land up in the Amity region-lands, early known as the Napper, (Napier) land, about Okolona. It was through his influence that my Uncle Charles Cargile located there. I have had in my possession two thin, worn silver spoons, given to Mary Hastings Marks, on her marriage, 1817; to John Runno Cargile, by her parents, John Harvie Marks and his wife, of Jasper Co., Ga. I have a pair of hand beaten silver spectacles which were used by either Jas. Marks, d. 1816, just prior to the Marks-Cargile marriage, or by Mrs. Cargile's father John H. Marks. I used the spoons recently at a breakfast given a Cargile bride, the gr., gr., gr., dr. of J. H. Marks, the donor of the spoons. Dr. Cargile's father had preserved them, and had given them to my mother. (Mrs. B. S. F.)

STARK

The name Stark is an old Saxon word, meaning brave, stout, strong, unyielding, and means in French a fort. We find many variations, Starke, Stark, Starck, Starkey, Starks, Starkie, Starky, Starkman, Stareman, etc. The family has been seated at Lancaster, Eng. and Killermont, Scotland, for many centuries, and at the present time there are many living in Surrey. The Starks came to Virginia in the early days, and here the name is always spelled with the final "e". James and Richard Stark, born in Scotland, were the pioneers and sons of Richard Starke, a merchant of Killemont, and Glasgow, Scotland. The son James and his wf. His wife Rachel Lewis, was the daughter of a famous Tory leader, who was called "Otter Skin Lewis," during the war, and while his son-in-law was away fighting on the side of the Revolutionists, "Otter Skin Lewis" with a band of Tories burned down the home of Joseph Jenkins, his son-in-law, showing at the time the feelings between the Tories and the Revolutionists. The coat of armor used by the American branch is; Azure, a chevron between three acorns in chief or, a bull's head erased in base or the second.

Several illustrations of Crests for Stark appear in Fairbairn's Crests.

Stark records, from Bible of Charles^1 Stark, which included dates of parents marriage, births, names and marriages of his brothers and sisters deaths, including his parents, his own marriage, etc. (Sent by Mrs. B. S. Foster).

King Family: Charles King, the first of whom we have note, was a patriot of South Carolina. He married Charity Pennington, daughter of Isaac Pennington, who had land grants, the earliest in the settlement. "Except some to the Germans, long before the Revolution". Charles King's will was dated 1789, 1, 25, Newberry Dist. S. C. His place of residence during the Revolution was Newberry District. His name appears in a list of patriots active in resistance to the measures of oppression during the period covered by 1776. He was a member of the Committee to execute the Continental Association. (See records Newberry, S. C.) Charles King and Charity Pennington had children as follows: 1. Jacob King, 2. Pennington King, 3. Lydia, m. Thos. Lindsay, b. Va., 4. Mary King, m. Jeremiah Stark; d. S. C., born in Va., 5. Ruth King, m. Thomas Stark, d. S. C., 6. Charity, m. Chapman Gordon, 7. Rebecca, 8. Keziah, 9, 10, 11, small children; names unknown.

The will of Charles King devises to every child 500 acres of land and several Negroes. In his will he refers to his wife Lydia, she was evidently not the mother of the children mentioned above, for Isaac Pennington deeds land Berkeley Co., S. C., to his "daughter Charity, wife of Charles King". Executors of the will of Charles King were "sons-in-law", Gordon and Jeremiah Starke, and his good friend Samuel Cannon. The records show that

Notes from Mrs. B. S. Foster.

Among the records of Charles Starke land settlements is a paper bearing a marginal note, to the effect, that he, Charles, in settling his father's (Jeremiah) business, had paid to "the widow of Reuben Starke" of certain property.

The tombstone in a country cemetery less than 10 miles from the "old Stark homestead", Charles Starke's residence, and where Jeremiah lived, bears this inscription; Reuben Starke, born in Virginia, early came to S. C., the last of six brothers, all brave Revolutionary soldiers (Grandpa knew this man's relationship to us, but we do not).

James Hervey Starke, s. of Charles, g. s. of Jeremiah, had to do with the settling of some matters involving Reuben Starke's connection with the affairs of the recently deceased Charles. This within the memory of Mrs. Mary Kezia (Stark) Campbell, dau. of Jas. Hervey Starke; she was living 1924.

The Confederate record of the J. H. Stark family is 100%. He died prior to hostilities. But his widow was active from a patriotic standpoint, and in a womanly way. She visited the hospitals, caring for the wounded in her own home, providing for soldiers and their families in every way possible. Both of her sons were in the army. Charles as Captain, and Jimmie was early captured, and spent practically the war period in prison, acting for the officers as clerk rather than accept freedom on parole, which was offered him.

Mary Stark's husband and Lizzie's, and Matt's were all soldiers. Jesse Campbell, William Burney and George Thomas. I do not know the record of Uncles Jesse and William, but Uncle George was addressed always as Col. Thomas, and I suppose that was his rank.

Kate (Catherine) married John Rogers McDaniel, who was actively engaged in the field throughout the four years. Her first acquaintance with him came about from her mother's reputation for hospitality to soldiers. He called at her home upon the suggestion of other Arkansas boys, who had been there, and who like himself.

Chapman Gordon and Jeremiah Starke qualified as executors for the said will. Charity King married Chapman Gordon, and they became the parents of General John B. Gordon, of Georgia. Thomas Butler King, member of Congress (1843) from Georgia, was also a second cousin of "Grandfather" Stark, and of Gen'l J. B. Gordon. The three were personal friends.

Samuel Cannon, Colonel, names in his will, his daughter Kezia among his executors, she married Charles Starke, son of his co-executor for Charles King. This line connects here with the Starks. q. v.

Charles Starke Mattison, s. of Mary King Stark and James Mattison, served in the Civil War as a brave soldier. He was leading his troops from his native town, Anderson, S. C., as Lieutenant Colonel, when he fell wounded at the battle of Seven Pines. He represented his people three times in the Legislature, and lived to amass a comfortable fortune, leaving to his family a name whose honor had no blot on it, and he was called a friend of the poor. Samuel Cannon Stark was the ancestor of Mrs. Mary Yarborough (Stark) Davis. q. v.

BERNARD

The Coat of Arms

The illustrated armorial of the Bernards is:

Arms: Argent, a bend azure charged with three escallops of the first.

Crest: A demi-lion argent.

Motto: Virtus probata florescit.

The coat of arms ascribed to the family of Virginia, that of Col. William Bernard, is blazoned:

Arms: Argent, a bear rampant sable, muzzled or. No crest is given and no motto, which may mean an old grant of arms.

Bernard suggested "bear," doubtless, and places the arms in the canting class, which is another argument in favor of a grant in the early days of heraldry, when a pun on the name seemed the proper thing for the heraldic charge.

The symbolism of the illustrated arms, represented by the metals and tinctures, is sincerity and loyalty, with the escallops, or shells, possibly denoting a Crusader somewhere along the ancient line.

Or, perhaps, if no brave Crusader adds luster to your history, there may have been a brave and heroic knight, a high-born cavalier. Frances Smith Gen. Col.

In the Old World History we find many interesting items connected with the name Bernard. In 1091; at Fontaines, near Dijon, in Burgundy, was born a boy who was destined to do great things. St. Bernard, the child, became one of the most illustrious preachers and representatives of Monasticism in the Middle Ages. His father was a Knight and a vassal of the Duke of Burgundy, who perished in the first crusade, his mother a gentle, pious woman; with her influence, and his own inclinations, led him to the cloister.

Because of his consecration and self-abnegation, he was chosen by the Abbott, to lay the foundation of the famous Abbey of Clairvaux, with which St. Bernard's name has ever since been associated in history. At that time no name stood higher in the Christian World. He died August 20, 1153.

Although the Bernards were among the earliest immigrants to Virginia, and came in all the grandeur of wealth, family, and position, very little seems to be known of their history. Many writers have given them notice, and despite the fact that numerous descendants have searched, and delved, long and faithfully, among old records, there seems little else to say, than has already been said.

The name has never become a common one, and has few variations, Bernard, Barnard, Barnett, and Bernhardt, being the most usual ones. Indeed, the early Virginia records show that the name sometimes was pronounced as if spelled Barnett. Intermarriages in Virginia, connected them with some of the most prominent and aristocratic families of the South, notably, Gaines, Taylors, Ludwells, Burwells, Flemings, etc.

William Bernard, aged 27 years, embarked at Gravesend, England, for Virginia, June 1635. He was perhaps the William Bernard, of Abingdon County, Northampton, Gent., who matriculated at Gray's Inn, Nov. 1, 1631. In an old paper, annotated in the Virginia Mag. Hist. and Biog., V. 4, 204; he is said to have been the son of the Knight Huntingdon. This person was perhaps Francis Bernard, who represented Huntingdon in Parliament, and was a Knight Baronet, died 1630? aged 66 years.

William* Bernard, same as above, died Dec. 31, 1665, Nansemond Co., Va., son of Francis Bernard, of Kingsthorpe, Northants, who died 1630, and brother of Sir Robert Bernard, Bart., of Brampton Hall, Huntingdonshire. (Va. Mag. IV; 207.)

William Bernard was born about 1598, and came to Virginia, in the ship America, 1625. He was a very prominent man in the early history of Virginia, and his line is noted in Virginia Mag. Vol. 24, p. 385-25; No. 1. Wm. and Mary Qty. V. 25, p. 184.

Margaret Bernard, was a sister of William*, and of Sir Robert Bernard, Baronet of Brampton Hall, Huntingdonshire, England. The Baronetcy was created 1662, and became extinct about 1789; Sir Robert died 1665, will probated 1666. Margaret Bernard married Daniel Gaines, of Rappahannock Co., Va., who died 1682, they were married in England, and had two children before coming to America, this is shown by headrights granted 1654, and issued to their son and daughter, Bernard and Elizabeth Gaines. See Gaines Chapter.

To the Bernards were granted the following Coat of Arms, Bernard. Virginia. Richard Bernard, York Co., Va., 1645. Argent, a bear, rampant sable muzzled, or. This arms appeared on the seal attached to a deed of Richard Bernard's, which was entered in York County, Va. record book 1645-9, answering in Burke's to Bernard of Abington, Northants.

Crest: a demi bear, muzzled, or Motto: Bear and Forbear.

GAINES

The Gaines name was originally Gaine, or Gane, during the first fifty years of its existence in the colony of Virginia.

The representatives of the family did not all come to the colonies at one time, nor did they all settle in Virginia. Neither is it definitely known upon what date the first Gaines came over to this country. Tradition it seems, claims that they came with one of the expeditions conducted by Sir Walter Raleigh, who referred in glowing terms to David Gain, (Gan?) who had saved the life of Henry V., at the field of Agincourt. Sir John Gaine was High Sheriff in 1600, of Brecon, Wales. And it may be that he was the progenitor of the Gaines immigrants to Virginia.

Thomas Gaines and Edward, were in Virginia, Accomac Co., 1633; Daniel Gaines, around whom our interest centers, was in Rappahannock, County 1654; James Gaines, in Rappahannock Co., Va., 1658; Robert in 1663. Thomas Gaines may have married his wife Margaret, in England, they had a son, John who married Martha, and had children, also a daughter Catherine, m.———Long. Thos. Gaines (1604-97), d. Essex Co., Va., m. 2nd, in his old age, Catherine, wid. of Thos. Pellette. No issue.

James Gaines lived in Rappahannock County, Va., also in Essex, and Richmond counties. There has been found no record of his children, but it is believed that he left issue, among them being Richard, brother, or ancestor of Gen. Edmund Pendleton Gaines and Mary Gaines, who married 1st, John Doyle; 2nd, Daniel Gaines. q. v.

The Virginia Land Register shows the following grants; Thos. Gaines, 1030 a. in old Rappahannock Co., Va., 1656; Daniel Gaines 1376 a. in the freshes of the Rappahannock River, 1, 24, 1665, for the transportation of 28 persons. Thos. Gaines 28 a. in Rappahannock, 4, 20, 1685; Robert Gaines, 186 a. in Rappahannock 1688; William Gaines, 240 a. in Lunenburg Co., both sides of Hound's Creek, 9, 10, 1755; Wm. Gaines, 261 a. in Culpepper, 1, 12, 1756. (Northern Neck Grants) and Hiram Gaines, 339 a. Albemarle Co., 2, 16, 1771. . . So. Hist. Ass'n Pub. 1893, V. 2.

Daniel Gaines was living in Rappahannock Co., Va., 1673.

Bishop Meade in his old Virginia Families and Churches, tells us that the Gaines Family was an old and leading one, in eastern Virginia, in colonial times, and immediately succeeding the Revolution. A number of the Gaines men distinguished themselves for bravery and courage, during the French, Indian, Colonial and Revolutionary Wars, as well as all subsequent wars. Bible and county records show intermarriages into other families, also noted for their wealth, culture and aristocracy. Some of which were the Grymes, Harvies, Holmes, Meriwethers, Royalls, Savage, Taliaferro, Taylor, Thornton, Todd, Walton, Wade, Strothers, and many others. Prominent in family records were the Taylors, Pollards, Roys, Lewises, Page, Pages, Nelsons, Harts, Richards, Turners, Shepherds, Carters, Kemps, Palmers, Dandridges, Cookes, etc. Most of these families were members of the Church of England, or the Episcopal Church. (St. Marks Par. Register.)

One well known genealogist, who has given extensive research to the Gaines and allied families*, has prepared a 20 page article on the Gaines family, claiming lineal descent from the good King Cadwalader, of Wales, and also a chart tracing King Edward V., through his mother, to Adam, in which King Cadwalader is in direct line to David, King of Isreal, through both King Solomon and Nathan the Prophet. This data she is compiling for publication.

From the records in the land office of Virginia and the state library, which contains the history of colonial and Revolutionary times with copies of wills, deeds, court orders and land grants, we find that six members of the Gaines family had located in the colony prior to 1650.

The Virginia family came to Chesapeake Bay, one of them James Gaines, settling on the eastern shore in Accomac County in 1620. Edward, thirty years old, settled in 1634. Thomas Gaines appears in old Rappahannock 1622, and Alexander Gaines in 1635.

In 1634 the Old Dominion had been divided into eight shires, James Gaines appears in Rappahannock by deed May 9, 1663, by patent to 519 acres of land, Mar. 2, 1667; also Thomas Gaines patented 700 acres, 4th of Oct., 1663; (see land book 5, p. 623.) To same 28 acres on Hoskin's Creek; same 10 acres 1668.

December 28, 1668, Thomas Gaines of Piscattocan deeded 365 acres to John Bennett. Robert Gaines patented 186 acres in old Rappahannock, north side of river, adj. lands of Robert Beverly; same book 7, page 693, 400 a. Sept. 5, 1677, Robert and Daniel Gaines deeded 1,150 a. to Robert Mayfield on south side of river. Daniel Gaines, June 2, 1661, patented 350 a. in old Rappahannock County. On Nov. 30, 1658, Governor Diggs deeds to Daniel Gaines and John Jennings 200 acres in old Rappahannock, for bringing eight settlers. July 28, 1663 to Daniel Gaines 400 acres in same county; also to Daniel Gaines and Nicholas Willard, 13,766 acres in 1665, (Bk. 5, p. 478—land office).

It may be noted that many early settlers were brought in by members of the Gaines family who received large grants.

Margaret A. Dowden, Genealogist, 211 Home St., Richmond, Va.

The will of Daniel Gaines, dated 15th of Aug. 1682. recorded Rappahannock, Essex Co., Va., gives to his son Bernard his silver hilted sword and belt, and his seal ring. He was by record in 1680, Justice of the Peace and a captain in the militia. Colonial Honors.

There are said to be records, as well as traditions, that Daniel, Thomas and Robert Gaines were brothers, and that they were grandsons of Sir John Gaines of Aberdeen, Wales, 1559-1608. His children were Thomas, Catherine, John, Walter. Richard, Elizabeth.

Sir John Gaines was the great grandson of Morgan, the eldest son of Sir David Gaines, the progenitor of the family. We will now turn to the Gaines family in Wales. Brecon County, Wales, was the home of the Gaines family at the earliest known period of its history. Originally the family name in Welsh was Gam, and subsequently became Games.

The family was one of distinction having been among the titled and ruling class in Wales and Great Britain. In addition to earls, and knights the family embraced a King of Wales and an Emperor.

In Dunn's "Heraldic Visitation of Wales", which was prepared by order of the king and given the coat of arms, and the genealogy of the Gaines family, in Wales, the crest is described as follows; "The field of silver, a dark lion, with a crown on its head." The genealogy lineal and collateral, is given in the Welsh language in two sections. The two parts were evidently prepared by an eminent genealogist of the time, Thomas Jones, who says at the outset.

"This pedigree is truly set forth by me, Thomas Jones, finished at Fountain Gate the 24th day of March, 1599".

In referring to the head of the family, Mr. Jones makes this important statement.

"From the David Gan, or Sir David Gam, knight, all ye names of Brecknegshire, and elsewhere are descended and, from Gladis the daughter of David Gam, all ye Vaughans and all ye Herberts of South Wales are descended and ye most part of all this nobility of England". p. 56.

David Gains was knighted by Henry V, of the field of Agincourt (1415 just before he died). He is said by his personal daring to have saved the life of Henry V, who was hemmed in and was about to be overpowered, but was himself mortally wounded. Referring to his bearing on the field, Jones, the historian says;

Sir Walter Raleigh has an eulogium upon his bravery, and exploits in the field of Agincourt, in which he prefers his greatness of soul to that of Mago, and compares him to Hannibal.

There can be little doubt but that he was the original of Shakespeare's character of Fluellin in Henry V, for says Jones' History of Brecon County, there was no other person of that country in the English army who could have been supposed to have been upon such terms of familiarity with the King; and it must be observed that Llewelyn was the name by which he was known in that army.

The family name in Great Britain has undergone various changes having been written at different times and places, Gam, Gams, Games, Gaynes, Gamme, Gane, and Gaines.

Rev. Theophilus Jones, in his history of Brecon County, Wales, (Brecknegshire) gives the genealogy of the family, and many valuable facts concerning it.

Jones gives the genealogy not only after the surname was assumed, but traces the line of descent back to the sixth century. This history of Mr. Jones is a folio edition, and is to be found in the Congressional Library.

David Gam had four brothers, Roger, Griffith, Richard, and William, and a sister Helen.

David Gam was the son of Llewelyn, a man widely known, and highly regarded in Wales. He entered the military service of the King as David ap-Llewelyn,—David, son of Llewelyn.

Previous to the Norman Conquest, nomenclature in Britain was in chaos. Personal names, the individual names, in pre-Norman history, were but the life of him to whom they were attached.

It was not until about the twelfth or thirteenth century that names began to become fixed, or hereditary.

David Gam was the fourth in descent from Einion Sais, the latter word meaning that Einion had lived in England, and inherited the estate and demesne of Castle Einion Sais. His father Llewelyn had also purchased the mansions of Peyton in the parishes of Garthbrengy and Llanddew, David's grandfather was Howel?

The historic seats of the family in Wales were Peyton Gwin, Newton, Buckland, Aberbran, Tregaer, Penderin and Porthamal. A picture of the residence of Sir John Gaines of Newton, built 1582, is given in the "Annals and Antiquities of the Counties and County Families, of Wales", by Thomas Nicholas. The house is still standing. On each side of the fireplace, in the great hall of the mansion, the shield of arms is sculptured in stone, and the names of Sir John and his progenitors for six generations are similarly preserved. At the close of the inscription is this sentiment, "On God depends everything". About six years after the union of England and Wales, Henry VIII issued his first summons for representatives to be sent from Wales to Parliament. In obedience to his summons, Edward Gaines was returned to Parliament 1542. Thomas Gains was a member from Wales 1572-1585. The following members of the family held the position of high Sheriff of Brecon County. Edward Gains, of Newton 1558; John Gains of Aberbran 1559; William Gains of Aberbran 1562; William Gains, of Aberbran, 1569; John Gains of Newton 1574-1596; Sir John Gains of Newton 1600; John Gains of Buckland, 1604; John Gains, of Aberbran 1608; Edward Gains of Newton 1623; Richard Gains of Penderin 1625; Edward Gains of Buckland 1647; Roger Gains, of Tregaer, 1652; Howel Gaines of Newton, 1657.

Lewis Dunn in his most valuable work on Welsh families, acknowledges his obligations to Sir John Gaines, of Porthamal, as being among the aristocracy by whom he "was permitted" to see the old records and books from religious houses, that had been written and their material collected by Abbotts and Priors.

In St. John's Church, Brecon, below the communion rail is the tomb of Edward Gaines, of Newton, Sept. 9, 1564.

In Christ Church, across the river from Brecon, a stone bears the name of Edward Gaines, of Tregaer. Near the pulpit, William, son of Meredith Gaines, 1605.

Peyton Gwin was the residence of Sir David Gam. Aberbran is referred to as "seat of the junior branch of the house of Abercamlais." Jones in History of Brecknockshire says, "The influence of the family of Games with the House of Lancaster, was extremely powerful".

In another place speaking of Sir David he says: "I have seen the descendants of this hero of Agincourt in possession of every acre of ground in the county of Brecon." Brecon county contains 719 square miles.

It should be mentioned here that various members of the Gaines family both in Wales and England were knighted by different sovereigns and as a rule each one adopted his own coat of arms and credit; consequently there is some confusion on this subject, in the works of Heraldry. We therefore have given crest described by Dunn as that of the Gaines family.

James Gaines came to Rappahannock Co., Va., 1658. We have found no will, or record of his children, but it is generally conceded and accepted, that he left children, and among them Richard, ancestor of General E. P. Gaines and Mary, who married 1st, John Doyle; 2nd, Daniel Gaines II. Martha Gaines, daughter of Daniel Gaines, and 1st wife Mrs. Mary (Gaines) Doyle, m. John Harvie. (Connect here with Harvie family this volume.)

The will of Daniel^3 Gaines (Bernard^2, Daniel^1) is dated 8, 19, 1757; Essex Co., Va. (Family records.)

Daniel^3 Gaines, m. 2nd, Elizabeth Jamison, (see Jamison Fam. this vol.) Their children were, a. Bernard, 3rd, b. George, c. William, d. Sarah, e. Eleanor, f. Boulware, g. Judith Gaines.

Daniel^3 Gaines, was a vestryman of Fredericksville and Trinity Parishes, in Louisa County, Virginia and Albemarle County 1762, and again when the counties were divided.

Miss Frances Mathews Hails and her sister Mrs. A. L. McLeod, of Montgomery, Ala., have given much time to the tracing of the Gaines Family, and accumulated records from various sources on the family.

DANIEL GAINES, LIVING VIRGINIA, PRIOR TO 1654

Daniel^1 Gaines is as far back as our branch of the family can trace a well established line. He married Margaret, daughter of Francis Bernard, of Kingsthorpe, Northamptonshire, Eng., who died 1630; sister of William and Sir Robert Bernard, of Brampton Hall, Huntingdonshire, England. (Va. Mag. IV; 207).

Daniel^1 Gaines and Margaret Bernard were married before coming to America, perhaps in England, they were accompanied by at least two grown children, for the records show that in 1654, there was a head-right of 400 acres on the south side of Rappahannock river, issued to Bernard Gaines and his sister Elizabeth Gaines, they were the children of Daniel Gaines, and came over with the colonists who were brought by R. Lawson.

Daniel^1 Gaines was the first Justice of the Peace in Rappahannock Co., Va., and on Oct. 11, 1671 he was a member of an old Committee of Amherst Co., Va. He was also Captain in the army of the King of England, 1680, in the Virginia Colonial Militia, a record of which may be found in Crozier's Virginia County, records, Williamsburg wills, and Virginia Mag. Hist. and Biog. V. 1. There is on record, a deed from Daniel^1 Gaines and wife Margaret Bernard, July 1667; Rappahannock County, Va. See Records Va. State Library, Richmond, Va. Capt. TAYLOR

Captain George[1] Taylor, Justice of Richmond Co., Va., name in first entry in first order book for the county, this bears date, 5, 4, 1692, Capt. George Taylor in 1685, with permission of the court, built on a convenient place on the County land, on the north side of the river, whereon the Court House then stood, a good and sufficient prison, for which he was to receive 7000 lbs. of tobacco.

At a court held 3, 6, 1704, he as Justice was present at a court held on that day, when the inhabitants of the Rappahannock section were having trouble with the Indians. It must have been soon after the said trouble that an attempted massacre was pending by the Indians, who killed several persons. Capt. George Taylor was one of the Justices appointed to try the Indians. (Va. Mag. Hist. and Biog. V. 39, p. 167.)

Capt. George Taylor;

The following order celebrating the birth of a Prince of Wales, in old Rappahannock County, now Essex and Richmond Counties, Va. is interesting; at a Court held for Rappahannock Co., 2nd Jan. Anno Dom., 1688.

Present—Col. John Stone, Capt. George Taylor, Capt. Sam Blumfield, John Rice, Justices.

"It having pleased Almighty God to bless his Royal Majesty with the birth of a son, and his subjects with a Prince of Wales, and for as much as his excellency hath set apart the 16th day of this inst., Jan. for solemnizing the same. To this end therefore, that it may be done with all expression of joy this county is capable of. This court have ordered that Capt. George Taylor do provide, and bring to the North side of Court House, for this county, now Richmond, as much rum, and other strong liquor, with sugar proportionable, as shall amount to six thousand five hundred pounds of tobacco. To be distributed amongst the troops of horse, company of foot, and other persons that shall be present at the solemnitie. And that the said sum be allowed him at the next laying of the levy." (See Life in Old Virginia, by McDonald).

Lieutenant-Colonel George Taylor's will was probated 8, 7, 1706; to daughter Martha (Taylor) Gaines, to George[3] Gaines, youngest son of said Martha Gaines; to Daniel[3] Gaines, eldest son of Bernard Gaines and the said Martha; to Henry Wilson; to Thos. Dickinson, "the writer of this my will", wife Susanna to be Executrix; Witnesses: Robt. Gordon, Elizabeth Bradley, Anna Post, Edward Jeffery, Thos. Dickinson. (Richmond County, Wills, Va.)

The compiler has searched faithfully for the ancestral line of Capt. (Lt.-Col.) George Taylor, but has never been able to advance one step further than his own generation. He was a man of prominence and importance, that is proven by the accompanying records, he was brave and courageous, as shown by the titles bestowed upon him in civil and military life. He filled many offices of honor and responsibility, and his name has come down to us as one to be proud of and it is to be regretted that we know so little about his antecedents. As far as we know he was the immigrant of his branch of the Taylors.

George Taylor was called both Lt.-Colonel and Captain, as the records show, he was a Justice of Lancaster Co., Va. from 1, 1, 1652; this is probably the Capt. George Taylor who was Justice of Richmond Co., Va. at its foundation 1692, Burgess 1699, 1701, when styled Col. George Taylor.

Capt. George Taylor married Martha Tomlin, before 1683, in Va. It is very likely that she was the first wife and mother of his daughter Martha, who married Bernard Gaines, for his will shows that his surviving wife was Susanna.

HARVIE

The Harvie name is said by some authorities to be of Norman origin, others that it is Saxon, derived from two Saxon words, viz.; Here, an army, wie a fort. The name has been variously spelled, Harvie, Harvey, Harvy, Harvye, Hervy, Hervey, etc.

Tradition tells us that the Harvies sprang from Llewelyn, the last native Prince of Wales. The name has always been preserved in the family.

The branch of the family in which we are directly interested is the Harvies of Edinburgh, Scotland. The family has been in Scotland a very long time, although at this date it cannot be ascertained where they came from, or how they originated. And owing to the lack of records prior to 1700 it is impossible to trace their ancestral lines.

Robert Tomlin's will dated 3, 7, 1683; Essex Co., Va., prob. 10, 9, 1688; names wife Rebecca; children: Robert, William, Rebecca, Hannah and Martha; brother, Capt. See Hayden's Gen.

It is not thought that they were among the old landed proprietors. The inference is, they came to England with the early Saxon invaders, passed into Scotland where they allied themselves, by marriage, or otherwise to the clans, to which they subsequently belonged.

Members of the family have impartially used the two forms of spelling, Harvie, Harvey. But the distinctive family of Harvies have never used the form Harvey. The name has proven very popular as a given name. It is almost certain that some degree of relationship may be traced to all the Harvies who came from Scotland in the early days and settled in Virginia.

John[1] Harvie, of Gargunnock, Sterlingshire, Scotland, was Mayor of Edinburgh at the time he left Scotland to seek a home in the new world. There is said to be still in the family a curious cup of horn, lined and bound with silver, that was presented to Mayor Harvie on his departure for America. On this cup was inscribed a glowing testimonial of the worth of this citizen, who became our ancestor.

On reaching America, Mr. Harvie settled near Richmond, Va. on a beautiful farm, still known as "Harvie's Hill," it is familiar to every citizen of Richmond and the surrounding country.

John[1] Harvie, died 10, 13, 1730? (See Middlesex Par. Reg., Va.) married Margaret Kay, of Gargunnock, Sterlingshire, Scotland. Some, or probably all of their children were born in Scotland, although we only have the record of one son. They are said to have come to America, shortly before 1730, bringing with them at least the one son John[2] Harvie, from whom descend all, or most, who trace their lineal descent from the Harvies of Virginia.

By reference to the Parish Register, of Gargunnock, Scotland, it is found that on Dec. 20, 1706, John, son of John[1] Harvie and Margaret Kay, was baptized, witnesses John McAlay and William Patterson. This last named John[2] Harvie immigrated to Virginia with his parents before he was grown. He is mentioned in "Some Virginia Immigrants" by Stannard, 2nd ed. and in Virginia Historical collections.

The Parish Register, of Gargunnock, Scotland, shows that there were other Harvies living there, contemporary with our Harvies, probably closely related.

Sept. 26, 1703; a son of William Harvie and Isabel Shirray, bap. Gargunnock, Scotland, this son named John, and the witnesses were James and John Harvie. William, James and John Harvie were very likely brothers, for all the names were handed down in the family of the immigrant John[1] Harvie.

John^2 Harvie took up land from the Crown in early 1740's, in Albemarle, Co., Va., contiguous to those of Peter Jefferson, father of President Thomas Jefferson. Their friendship grew to such an extent that John Harvie became the guardian of Thomas Jefferson in his youth, and one of the earliest efforts of the statesman's pen was an inquiry addressed to Mr. Harvie, respecting the method of his education. Mr. Harvie was one of the original attorneys who practiced in the courts of Albemarle Co., Va., 1745, as late as 1765 he was practicing law. He was a member of the House of Burgesses, 1765; was administrator upon the estate of Peter, father of Thomas Jefferson. On coming to America, he and his parents, first settled in Richmond Co., Va., moving into Essex Co., and still later moving to Albemarle, where he spent the last days of his life. He was a member of Conventions, and an official of the colonial government. John Harvie was vestryman in Fredericksville, Parish (Trinity) 1742-6; in Louisa and Albemarle counties. He was assistant surveyor of Albemarle Co., appointed to Treat with the Indians 1751; after their first defeat at Point Pleasant. The Harvies and Randolphs were close friends and neighbors, and there were some intermarriages in the two families.

Martha Gaines³ Harvie (John², John¹), b. Aberfoyle, Albemarle Co., Va., 8, 24, 1749; bap. by Rev. Rose. She was a woman of fine sense, and much beloved by her family of many children. Her mother's will made especial provision for her. She married a John Moore, but which one has caused genealogists and family historians much research and worry. Wood's in his history of Albemarle Co., Virginia, says of him, that he was executor for Matthew Jouett, in 1745; and that he married as his first wife Frances, daughter of Matthew Jouett; second Martha, daughter of John Harvie. And we have been told of a copy of the will of John Moore, that mentions his beloved wife Martha Harvie, and minor sons, Edward and James and daughters. See elsewhere this volume.

This will is said to give the date of probation as 1777; on the other hand descendants of the couple have worked long and hard on the matter, and have found an error as to records, but have not yet straightened it out. Names all coincide, but the dates do not. Mrs. H. C. Jones, Huntsville, Alabama, a genealogist of note, has worked tirelessly on the line, and has proven to her satisfaction that the John Moore mentioned by Wood's History is not the John

The Harvie Family sketch from here on will deal only with the descendants of Elizabeth (Harvie) Marks and a few others.

Moore who married Martha Harvie, and became the progenitor of the Harvie—Moore descendants in Alabama.

If the John Moore making the will aforementioned is the same John Moore who married Martha Harvie, then the list of children appearing under their names is erroneous, and does not belong there.

On the other hand descendants of the family claim they are in lineal descent from the John Moore who married Martha Harvie. And the names of the children were found on an old paper in the possession of Miss Minnie Jordan, Gurley, Alabama. It is a complication that seems impossible to work out, and the compiler assumes no responsibility for either tracing. She is merely including it here so as to furnish a working basis for other interested genealogists.

Letter from Thomas Jefferson to his guardian, John^2 Harvie, Colonel, 1, 14, 1740; "Sir; I was at Colo. Peter Randolph's about a fortnight ago, and my schooling falling into discourse, he said he thought it would be to my advantage to go to the College, and was desirous I should go, as indeed I am myself for several reasons.

"In the first place as long as I stay at the mountain the loss of one-fourth of my time is inevitable, by company's coming here and detaining me from school, and likewise my absence will in a measure, put a stop to so much company, and by that means lessen the expense in housekeeping. On the other hand by going to College, I shall get a more universal acquaintance, which hereafter may be serviceable to me and I suppose I can pursue my studies in the Greek and Latin, as well there as here, and likewise learn something of the mathematics.

"I shall be glad of your opinion, and remain, Sir, your most humble servant, Thomas Jefferson."

*It is not known where the family of Leonards came from, but the tide of immigration that came to Georgia during the decade following the Revolution brought to Richmond County, John Leonard, and to Wilkes county a James Leonard, the latter had a family of daughters. Van Leonard, a brother of James, also came to Wilkes, he moved to Madison Co., Ga., later removed to Muscogee Co., near Columbus, where he raised his family. He was a man of wealth and influence, and represented his county in the state Legislature. The Leonards were farmers. Van seems to have been a popular given name, and has been handed down in the family. Some contributors give the full name as Van de Leonard, we find it as plain Leonard in Alstons, of North and South Carolina, by Dr. J. A. Groves, and Judith Cosby Harvie in her will mentions her son-in-law "Van Leonard", the Van being the given name.

*Dr. Richard Lemuel Butts, Surgeon C. S. A. in early life practiced his profession in Columbus, Ga., afterwards in Talbottom, Ga., and in later years, the last of his life, in Midway, Bullock, County, Ala. He was born, 11, 1, 1824; Columbia, Ga.

Major Littlebury Watts, when a young man volunteered to fight against the Indians, in the Florida War, and together with Willis B. Menifee assisted in removing the Cherokee Indians across the Mississippi River, in 1835; he was repeatedly elected to the state Legislature, and was Clerk of the Superior Court of Campbell County, at the time of his death.

George Menifee in 1625; was in Jamestown, Va., a prominent merchant; in 1629 a Burgess from James City; and in 1635 member of the Council; there is no doubt but that all bearing the name in this country, are descended from him.

Willis P. Menifee was one of a very large family of children. living in Palmetto, Georgia.

DESCENDANTS OF COLONEL JOHN^3 HARVIE, AND MARGARET JONES

John^3 Harvie (John^2, John^1), Esq., b. Aberfoyle, Albemarle Co., Va., 10, 23, 1747. U. S. census shows he was still living there 1790, d. 1807, at Belvidere, his country estate, nr. Richmond. Death caused by a fall received while superintending the building of his mansion, the "Grey House". He was one of the signers of the Articles of Confederation, 1778, at Philadelphia, in behalf of the State of Virginia. Was also Commissary General of Virginia, by appointment of his friend Gen. Thos. Jefferson, which office he continued to hold up to the time of his death.

Mr. Harvie was a member of Conventions 3, 6, 1775-7-4, 1776; was an official of the Colonial Gov., mem. of Cong., 1778-9, and vestryman of Fredericksville, Par., 1787. A prominent man in his generation, was one of the first lawyers in point of time, who practiced at the Albemarle Bar. (Green's Ky. Families, p. 34.) And was a member of the Continental Congress. He owned large tracts of land in the county of Albemarle, among them being Belmont. The home place of his father John² Harvie, the Barracks, and Pen Park.

Col. John³ Harvie owned the land now embraced in Hollywood Cem. Richmond, Va., where the Harvie burying ground, reserved when the property was sold, still lies undisturbed. The Harvie tract adjoined others purchased by Thomas Rutherford, from Alexander Buchanan, and extended down James riv. from the cemetery limits. (Rich. Times Despatch.)

Col. Harvie rented his house to the City of Richmond, Va. to be used as a Land Office, at 30 lbs. per annum. Apr. 5, 1788, (Va. State Papers, V. 4.)

John³ Harvie. James Marks, Dr. George Gilmer, John Rodes, William and Thomas Johnson, William D. Meriwether, etc., Vestrymen from Louise Co., Va. and from Albemarle Co., Va., 1787. (Wood's Hist. Albemarle Co., Va.)

In 1779 Col. John³ Harvie bought nearly 300 a. on Ivy Creek, near the Barracks, from Micajah Clarkson. John Harvie was educated in Scotland and possessed some note as a politician, was a delegate from Augusta Co., Virginia to the state convention 1775-6; represented the state of Virginia in Congress, after his resignation as Register of the Land Office he was elected by the city of Richmond a member of the House of Delegates, but only served one or two years, when he retired to private life.

From the Calendar of State Papers, Vols. 4, 6, we glean the following, "John Harvie to Gov. Randolph 1, 30, 1787; the supply of parchment in the Land Office is nearly exhausted, and that ordered from Philadelphia has not come to hand, and none is to be obtained in Richmond. I am reduced to the alternative of either stopping the issuance of grants, or have them made on paper. To adopt the former course would seriously embarrass the business of this office, in view of the numerous applications for grants. As the parchment from Philadelphia is to come by water, great delay must ensue. I therefore, desire instructions in the premises. His excellency's predecessor Mr. Henry under like circumstances did affix his signature to grants made out on paper."

John[3] Harvie, Register of Land Office, to Gov. Randolph informs him that warrants for military services performed in the State and Continental line, have been issued for 4,185,000 acres of land.

Mr. Harvie was elected Ensign in the Albemarle Co., of Militia, a volunteer Co., during the War of the Revolution, (Wood's Hist. Albemarle Co., Va.). Justice of the County for Henrico Co., Va., he certified that the oath giving assurance of fidelity to the Commonwealth, and the oath of Governor were duly administered to Edmund Randolph, Esq., Dec. 1st, 1786. (See Va. State Papers, V. 5, Harvie Notes, pp. 4, 246, 273, 302, 367, 451, 538, 539, and other volumes of Virginia State Papers.

By Col. John[3] Harvie's influence as a Congressman he procured the establishment of the prison camp at the barracks, when Virginia was fixed upon as a depot for the prisoners, he proposed to Congress to remove the Convention Army to a tract of land owned by him, about six miles from Charlottesville, and about four miles from the Blue Mountains, and nearly two hundred from the sea coast. Congress passed the resolution, and he was given the contract to build the barracks, lay in the provisions, etc., he made his home for many years at Belmont, but on receiving his appointment of Register of the Land Office, he removed to Richmond, Va., or near there.

JOHN HARVIE, OF VIRGINIA, LATER OF KENTUCKY

John[4] Harvie, b. Richmond, Va., 12, 1, 1783; d. of malignant carbuncle, in Frankfort, Ky., 9, 20, 1838. His father John Harvie, was one of the signers of the (Va.) Articles of Confederation, and for many years, Register of the Land Office. He also filled various other offices of honor and trust in that commonwealth.

John Harvie, the son and the subject of this sketch, was educated at William and Mary College, in Williamsburg, Va. His grandfather on maternal side was Gabriel Jones, the famous Shenandoah lawyer, a kinsman and executor of Lord Fairfax, with a young Mr. Grymes, a young Virginia lawyer, who later removed to Louisiana, and became one of the most famous members of the New Orleans bar. In 1808, he married his cousin, Miss Margaretta Hawkins, dau. of John Hawkins, a highly influential and prominent citizen of Scott County, Ky., and also a granddaughter, through her mother, Anna Gabriella Jones, of Gabriel Jones. The Harvie and Hawkins families are of mixed Scotch, English, and Welsh descent. Tracing their lineage back through their Jones ancestry, for centuries, to the ancient princely house of Wales. They number among their family connections, more or less near by blood, or marriage, many of the most eminent and influential old families of Virginia and Kentucky. The Washingtons, Jeffersons, Madisons, Lewises, Randolphs, Joneses, Strothers, Marshalls Brockenbroughs, Blairs, Breathitts, Butlers, Taylors, Garrards, Buckners, and others nearly, or equally prominent. Mr. Harvie immigrated to Kentucky in 1813, to one of the richest farms in Woodford County, but removed thence to Frankfort, in 1818. January 20, 1820, he was elected by the Legislature a director of the old Bank of Kentucky and by the same body on December 7, 1820, chosen President of the Bank of Kentucky, this position he held for eight years when he resigned. On Dec. 20, 1826, the same body elected him as one of the commissioners to superintend the building of the State House;

Feb. 28, 1835, Gov. James T. Morehead appointed him one of the State Board of Internal Improvements, but he resigned Jan. 22, 1836. August 3, 1835, the Whigs elected him to the Legislature from Franklin County. Mr. Harvie was a remarkable man, with the highest sense of honor, and his character blended almost every manly virtue. He was one of the very finest specimens of the Old Virginia Gentleman, and that conveys the most perfect idea of his life and character. He at one time studied law, but never engaged in its practice. The care and management of his large estate occupied the greater portion of his time and attention. The large fortune he inherited and acquired by marriage, was somewhat increased by his own enterprise and judicious investments. He was generous to the highest degree. He was an intimate friend of both Henry Clay and John J. Crittenden, and the three spent much of their spare time together, especially after the death of Mr. Harvie's wife.

Mr. Harvie was the father of nine children, only four of whom survived him, they were:

Gabriella A., m. James Breathitt; John S.. 3. Miss C. Ellen; and Col. Lewis E., all residents of Frankfort, Ky.

COL. LOUIS EDWIN HARVIE OF FRANKFORT, KY.

Col. Louis Edwin Harvie, lawyer, farmer, and manufacturer, was b. 10, 9, 1825, at Frankfort, Ky., son of John Harvie; he received a thorough education and graduated 1843. Graduated in law at Harvard College, in 1845. On the breaking out of war, in 1861, he took sides with the South, and in the following year, became Aide Camp, with the rank of Captain, on the staff of General Buckner, serving in various capacities, and holding some important positions of trust, until the close of the war. The Harvies, father and son, were each in his day, active with their means, time, and ability, in the promotion of enterprises public, and private.*

John Walker, Sr., rendered service during the Revolution. (See Daughters American Revolution, papers, Official Record.)

James Lemant, b. 1740, in Ireland, (Dumfane, near Ballymena) came to Charleston, S. C., 1773, and settled in Chester Co. Died 1780, of wounds received at battle of Monck's Corners, was one of Marion's men. (Official D. A. R. record.) He married in Ireland, Martha, dr. of James Smyth, of Killyfleugh, Co. Antrim; she also rendered service during the Revolution, helping in the fields; on one occasion the British questioned her regarding the whereabouts of her husband. She would not tell, so they placed a rope about her neck, saying they would hang her. She still refused to tell, so the Captain said, "Let the woman go, she is too brave to hang."

HARVIE

The following reminiscences were taken from a letter written, October, 3, 1853, by Charles S. Jordan, Jr., (a very old man) to his daughter, Janet Harvie Jordan, with some additional notes from Governor George R. Gilmer.

Your great grandfather John[1] Harvie, married Margaret Kay, in Scotland; their son John[2] Harvie, came to America with him, settled in Virginia, married Martha Gaines. The late Edmund Pendleton Gaines of the U. S. Army, was of the same family. My mother knew, and I have heard her, often, tell the name of the Clan, to which my gr. gr. father John Harvie, belonged, in his native country, but not regarding the information of any value, at the time, I did not charge my memory with the recollection of it.

Your Uncle Fleming has in his possession a large chest, which my grandfather Harvie brought to this country, it is made of a peculiar kind of black oak, which grows in the mountains of Scotland. He came to this country before he was grown, and bound himself by indentures, to a merchant in Richmond County, Va. to serve him for a term of years as a clerk, but the merchant becoming dissatisfied with business sold his stock, and returned to Scotland. What particular line of business my grandfather followed immediately after this affair, I do not know, but at some time afterward, he studied law, and succeeded in building up considerable professional reputation, besides amassing a fortune, which implies that he must have been a man of more than common sense, and of much energy of character.

Grandfather John[2] Harvie has been described to me as being a large man with light hair. His daughter Aunt[3] Mary, married David Meriwether, your Aunt Anna Jordan's great uncle; I recollect seeing her but once, and then I was but a child, she was very old, and could get about only with difficulty. She was the only one of the family who lived to be very old, a daughter Martha, only child surviving childhood, married Col. Benjamin Taliaferro. q. v.

Aunt Elizabeth[3] Harvie, who married James Marks, was a most amiable woman, and decidedly one of the smartest, I ever knew, but was exceedingly modest in her pretentions, she was extremely careful in all she said, or did to avoid giving offence to others. She was very large, weighing 300.

The Harvie's were all very large people, Daniel Harvie was a man of immense size, reaching nearly 400 lbs. and of Herculean strength. A story is told of him that he carried with ease the end of a stick of timber, that six men could not raise from the ground, that he righted the corner of a mill house which had been put out of place by a freshet, that he raised a heavy hogshead of tobacco, over the ground sill through the door of the tobacco house, that he could hold up for some time two men of ordinary size, one on each hand, with his arms extended their full length, from his body. He was stronger than Francisco, he was also a man of fine character, of mild and lovable disposition, was never known to be angry, and all who knew him were his friends.

My grandmother, Janet Harvie Jordan, was a very tall woman, and very large, she had strong, but not uncomely features. Her forehead was high and massive, prominent immediately over the eyes, she was the largest of the Harvie sisters, and when her size became too great for her to visit, or attend religious services in her carriage, she traveled in her wagon. She was a fine conversationalist, loved to talk, and had an inexhaustible fund of anecdotes, and was not less remarkable for her wit, than for her weight. Her husband Reuben Jordan, had black hair, eyes, and dark complexion, very erect and active, was very handsome when young, being a descendant of Pocahontas, his taste followed his Indian blood, so far as hunting and the love of excitement went.

William Harvie, my uncle, was born 1761, died 1815, married Judith Sydnor Cosby, who was born 1767, d. 1827, a maternal aunt of Bishop James O. Andrews. Uncle William was a tall, and very large man, of striking appearance, the first time I ever saw him he was dressed in a drab colored suit, coat, vest, and pants, with silver knee buckles. He was a man of extensive reading, and possessed a large fund of information, was a great talker, and was fond of company.

Uncle William rendered active service in the Revolution, as a private, his name, as well as that of his brother Richard, is on the list of Revolutionary soldiers, recorded in the state Capitol, in Richmond, Va. In politics he was a Federalist, and thereby excluded from holding office, except that of Justice of the Inferior Court, which having no pay attached to it, and yet requiring intelligence and integrity, for the proper discharge of its duties, was filled by the patriotic, whose services could be obtained without any investigation about their opinion of Jay's Treaty on the French Revolution.

James Marks, husband of Elizabeth Harvie was, so Gilmer says, low in stature, and weighed 120 lbs. certainly a contrast to his wife.

William Harvie and Aunt Judith, his wife, joined the Methodist Church, during the great revival of religion among the Broad River people, in 1809, and gave ample evidence throughout their after lives, of their sincerity, and Christianity.

Generally persons that are remarkably fond of talking have but little fondness for books. But this was the exception, and was not the case with any of the Harvies, they were noted for their fondness for both. It may be remarked of the Harvie family, as a whole, that they liked ease, and were of a cheerful, happy, temperament, extraordinary in intellect, and mental achievements. But what presents them in a light most pleasing to the family pride, is the fact that not a single disgraceful impropriety blots the character of any of them, their conduct in all the relationships of life has been proof against defamation.

Judith Sydnor Cosby, wife of William Harvie, was the sister of Gov. James Cosby, of Georgia, she had very extensive connections in Virginia, and Georgia, viz.; Garlands, Overtons, Wingfields, McGehees, Meriwethers, etc., in England her descent dated back to the historic families of Seymour, Sydney, etc.

Francis Sydnor, of Gray's Inn, Middlesex, Esq. will dated 1653; "To my kinsman. Fortunatus Sydnor, of Greenwich, Kent, aged about 15 yrs. £ 40 at 21, if he died before, same to my niece, Judith Goldsmith, of Purpoole Lane, and to Chas. and Matthias Goldsmith, sons of my nephew Charles G. physician, equally whereas I lent to my nephew Henry Sydnor, of Norwich, grocer, £ 20 by Bond, I release him of same, and to him £ 10 more. To said Charles, and Matthias Goldsmith, 60 £ between them at 21 years, to my said nephew Chas. G., the physician, my watch, same to be delivered to my said niece Judith G., to be kept for my said nephew until his return into England. Will probated 6, 19, 1656. See Va. Hist. and Biog. Mag. V. 30, p. 44."

Fortunatus is an old name in the Sydnor family, and one Fortunatus Sydnor lived in Lancaster Co., Va., 1670. Lyon G. Tyler, Editor of Tyler's Magazine was preparing to publish an extensive article on his descendants.

The following letter was written by Mrs. H. M. Concklin, in answer to a letter of inquiry from one of our cousins, Mrs. Lucy Corker, of San Antonio, Texas, at the dictation of her father, Col. John Marks Moore, son of William Harvie Moore, and his wife Mary Garland Moore,—Elisha Chapman Moore.

"Richard Harvie was our grandfather's (W. H. Moore) uncle, on his mother's side. Although, he died an old bachelor, he was one of the most prominent men of his time. He was the first Mayor of Charlottesville, Va., and had a cup presented to him. It bore the inscription, Ninean Menzies, it was presented in 1776.

"When he died his property was bought in by his brothers, and sisters. John Davenport must have married one of the Miss Harvies, for at that sale Mr. Davenport bought the cup, and gave it to father John Marks Davenport Moore, with the promise that it was to descend to John Marks Davenport Moores, all down the line.

The gun which Uncle Meriwether Lewis carried with him across the Rocky Mountains. was given to my father John M. D. Moore, and kept with great care by him.

"When the Federals attacked Corpus Christi, 8, 3, 1862, we put some of the most valuable things in a sail boat to go up the Neuces Bay. The boat was upset by a sudden squall, and everything was lost. The gun included, it had a silver box of oil inserted in the stock. Meriwether Lewis' name was engraved on it. We have been told that Dolly Madison, the wife of President Madison, had a tomahawk made for Meriwether Lewis, which has also a peace pipe and Ma thinks Uncle Meriwether Moore's family has the tomahawk yet.

"Maggie Headen has taken great interest in your questions, she says Cousin Clare King, Mrs. Huey, now has a family record of all grandfather's family. Have you written to Aunt Mary Yuelle, she ought to be able to give you all the data. Our family Bible was among the articles that went down in the Bay."

Marshall—

John Marshall, late Chief Justice of the U. S., b. Germantown, Fauquier Co., Va., his family moved several times, and were living at Oak Hill, at the commencement of the Revolution. He was the son of Thomas Marshall, and Mary—his father was a planter of limited means, but with strong natural powers, and great ability, he served in the Revolution as a Colonel in the Continental Army. His son John was the eldest of 15 children, in 1775 he was appointed Lt., in the "Minute Battalion", and had an honorable share in the battle of Great Bridge, July 1776; his promotions followed rapidly. He d. Philadelphia, Jl. 6, 1835; b. 6, 9. 1755; buried at Shocco Hill, Richmond, Va.; his daughter Mary, married into the Harvie family of Richmond, Va. Ref. Gen. Influenced by his enthusiasm Francis Meriwether, Benjamin Taliaferro, and one or two others, visited Georgia in 1784. They were pleased with the neighborhood families on Goose Pond, and the land, they bought acreage and settled there. They and many of their friends, and relations; Harvies, Meriwethers, Taliaferros, Gilmers, Matthews, Barnetts, Crawfords, Johnsons, Jordans, McGehees, Marks, Freemans, etc., removed to Georgia, with their families immediately afterward. Capt. John Marks served under Baron Steuben, in the Revolutionary War, and his discharge papers are now in the possession of members of the family. He was with 10th Va. Regt., 1779-1785. Sheriff of Albemarle Co., Va., where he was born. He removed to Georgia a short time before his death, his wife was born 1752; m. 1787. DAR Lin. Bks. He received a grant of land in Bass Co., Ohio, for his services in war.

There are several versions of the history of John Moore, who married Martha Harvie. Some authorities say that he married 1st, Martha Jouett; 2nd, Martha Harvie; this seems quite improbable, and hardly possible, according to Mrs. H. C. Jones, Huntsville, Ala., one of the family historians, who has worked untiringly on this line. According to dates it would seem that there was another John, perhaps father of the John in question, who m. Frances Jouett. John b. 1750, could have been son of John Moore, who was execr. of the will of Matthew Jouett, d. 1745; five years before the accepted date of John Moore's birth, 1750. The confusion in placing the John Moores is not strange, for there were several men of the name, in the same locality in Virginia, at or about the same time.

Will of Richard^3 Harvie, bachelor son of above named Martha Gaines Harvie, and her husband John Harvie, dec'd. Richard Harvie died January 2, 1798. Albemarle Co., Va.

I, Richard Harvie, do make this my last will, and testament, and revoking all others, heretofore made, viz.;-

Item; I desire that all of my just debts be paid, out of what estate I may leave behind me, and the residue if any be divided as follows;

Item; To my dear mother the use of my Negro fellow Stephen, and my Negro wench Easter, during her natural life, and then to return to my estate.

Item; I desire that the sum of $200.00 shall be given to Mess. George Keppen, and Co., in gratitude to those agents, and to be divided according to their respective interests in that concern, for their taking me amongst the first of the Virginia store keepers, and by their so doing, has been the cause of my making the greatest part of the estate I have, by being brought up to business, and it is my desire that a good hogshead of tobacco should be sent to my good, and worthy old school master, Mr. Alex McCaul, of Glasgow.

Item; My will and desire is that the residue of my estate, of what kind soever, both real, and personal, shall be divided after Daniel Gaines Moore, my nephew, shall have attained the age of twenty-one years, be equally divided between the children of my dear brothers, John, Daniel and William Harvie, and my dear sisters Mary H. Meriwether, Martha H. Moore, Margaret H. Davenport, Elizabeth H. Marks, and Jeanette H. Jordan.

Item; My will is that my good friend Charles Irving, my brothers John, Daniel and William Harvie, do see that my last will and testament is executed, and I further desire that my gun blunderbus, and regimental sword be given to Mr. Charles Irving.

The above is written with my own hand, and signed this eighth day of May, one thousand, seven hundred and eighty-three.

Signed in the presence of us;

Harvie—Moore Notes;

John Moore, Jr., an Officer in the Revolution, his was one of the first commissions signed by Washington. He was listed in Heitman's Register, p. 399. Rev. Sold. of Va. See V. 8, p. 516. N. S. D. A. R. No. 188766.

After the Revolution, he with a large number of neighbors, friends, and relatives moved to Oglethorpe Co., Ga. Later when that part of the Mississippi Territory, which later became Madison Co., Ala., was opened for settlement, he with several of his children sought other fields, and about 1810, moved to Alabama. Here he died before 1817. He married Martha, dr. of John, and Martha (Gaines) Harvie. John Moore comes in for his share of Governor Gilmer's caustic writings, in his "Early Settlers in Upper Georgia". The Governor played no favorites, and not one family or its representative, about whom he wrote, escaped the venom of the old man's pen. So John Moore's descendants need not take what he said seriously, and too much too heart, for John Moore was a man of culture, and refinement, a noted penman, and a brave, and courageous soldier.

From the tracings of Mrs. H. C. Jones, Huntsville, Ala.

Miss Minnie Jordan, Gurley, Ala. has a mourning ring which belonged to Martha Harvie Moore, it has a little glass inset containing a lock of hair, and inside is inscribed "John Harvie 6, Feb. 1807; ae. 61 years." The Hills of Wilkes Co., Ga., contains notes on the members of this family, as does Saunders, "Early Settlers of Ala." They were very large people, it is said the nine of them weighed 2700 lbs., an average of 300 pounds each.

The above will would indicate that Richard Harvie amassed a great estate, by merchandising. He marched to Williamsburg, Va., 7, 11, 1775; under Lt. Geo. Gilmer. He was one of the signers of the Albemarle, Dec. of Ind., signed 4, 21, 1779. He was a man of superior mind. Dr. Rose bro-in-law of Pres. Madison, in 1825 remarked to Chas. S. Jordan, then visiting in Alabama, that Richard Harvie was one of the best informed men he had ever conversed with, his taste was literary, and his time devoted to reading. His library was large, and was made up of the best books. He cared nothing for distinction, lived the life almost of a recluse, devoting his time with the intensity of a student to books. Quartermaster Sergt., of 2nd Battalion of Minute Men. He with others marched to Williamsburg to demand satisfaction of Lord Dunmore for the removal of the powder, etc. Wood's History of Albemarle County, Va.

Jane Lemant, b. 1768, in County Antrim, Ireland, came to America with her family, landing at Charleston, 1773; d. 10, 8, 1856; bur. at the Old Stone Church, Pendleton, S. C. Once during the Revolution she carried a message for Gen'l Sumter, through the Tory line, concealed in a double heel she had knitted in her stocking. (D. A. R. Record.)

JOHN HARVIE, ESQ.—From James Wood's Note Book

Dear Sir;

I have very carefully examined all the papers respecting your wood account, and cannot devise any mode of settlement, but what must make you a very considerable loser; the one prescribed by General Hamilton will be making you an allowance perhaps for a tenth part of the quantity used but I really can't see any other way of doing it, so as to render his accounts passable upon his settlement with the British Auditors. 12th, Mar. 1780.

Following is a recent picture of the original home, of John^2 Harvie, "Belmont", Charlottesville, Albemarle County, Va. This was built by John Harvie before his death in 1767. After his death his son John Harvie lived in it. He then moved to Richmond, Va. and sold it in 1811, to Dr. Charles Everett. The original coffee bean trees are there and very large and beautiful.

The front of the house, as shown in the picture is just as it was originally except that the second story was a half story with dormer windows.

The original house, supposed to have been built by John Harvie, had nine small rooms, was one and a half stories high, with wings at each end, and high dormerwindows, giving it an antique appearance.

In 1858 the old house was removed to the rear, divided into two out-buildings and upon its site a new mansion was built by Dr. Everett, which was destroyed by fire in March 1883. Again the

JAMISON

The Jamisons doubtless of Scotch lineage, are said to have originated in a Highland Clan, of Gunn. They made their first appearance in the extreme northern part of Scotland, in what is now Sutherland, and Caithness. The most reliable authorities agree that the founders of this clan were Norsemen, there are however some dissenting views on the subject.

The tartan of the Clan of Gunn, is one of the most beautiful of all of the Scotch tartans. The body is dark green relieved by wide bands composed of narrow stripes of black, which intersect each other at right angles, while midway between the wide band of black are wide stripes of red. See Scottish Clans, and their tartans. No. 28.. Clan of Gunn.

There were Jamisons, Jamiesons, Jamesons, etc., in Aberdeenshire, Lanarkshire, Clackmanshire, etc., Scotland.

The spelling of the name has many variations as Jamison, Jamieson, Jameson, Jemyson, Jemmyson, the old fashion pronunciation was invariably "Jimmerson".

Many Jamisons came over from Scotland, some of whom stopped in Virginia, and it is of these immigrants, and some of their descendants that this sketch has been compiled.

The records and deeds of Essex County, Va. date back to 1656; orders of Courts, to 1683; but the books show no records of births, deaths, and marriages prior to 1853. The Jamisons are an old family of Virginia, where they married into the families of Scott, Meriwethers, Gaines, Wyatts, Gardens, Carringtons, Taylors, and many others of like importance.

David Jamison (Hon.) noted at length, elsewhere this volume, married Mildred Smith, dr. of Edmund Smith, and his wife Agnes Sclater, her tomb is ornamented with the Jamison Arms, impaled with the arms of Smith, and is on Temple Farm, York County, Va., which once was the property of Maj. Lawrence Smith, of Yorktown, Va.

Jamison Coat of Arms; Azure Dexter; a saltire cantoned with four ships; sinister; a chevron between 3 acorns slipped leaved. Crest; a ship. Motto; viv————o———ut vuvas (words partially worn away).

The first corresponds in Burke to the arms of Jameson, of Scotland, the sinister, in Glazebrook's "Family of Smith", to the arms, of Smith of Tottne, England. The family to which Maj. Lawrence Smith belonged. William and Mary, Qty., V. 2, No. 1.

Jamison Arms, Essex Co., Va., Azure, a saltire, or cantoned with 4 ships under sail, argent.

The first census U. S. (1790) shows the name spelled 18 different ways, with 140 heads of different families, total of 708 souls, Pennsylvania leading with 49 families, Maryland 14, Virginia 22, North Carolina 12, and South Carolina with 11, respectively, average to family was 5.1.—Contributed by Henry Strother, Fort Smith, Ark.

James[1] Jamison, and his wife Margaret————according to records resided in the Parish of St. Anne's, Essex Co., Va., which was established in 1693. They gave a deed conveying 50 acres of land to Thos. Short, which was recorded May 17, 1720. On that same day Margaret Jamison relinquished her right of dower, in said land.

Mrs. Margaret Jamison probably died before her husband, as no mention is made of her in his will, dated 4, 19, 1736, pro. 11, 17, 1736. q. v.

It is not known who were the parents of the above James Jamison. Some authorities quote him as the son of James Jamison, whose death is said to have occurred 1, 17, 1720, in Middlesex County, Virginia, and of whom nothing more is known.

*David Jamison, 1777, one of the privy council, 1781, Lt. Gov. of Va., under Gov. Thos. Nelson, and in 1783, a member of the State Senate, etc., was also prominent merchant of Yorktown. Will pro. 7, 22, 1793, recorded at Hustings Court of that place. See copy elsewhere this volume. In the will Martha^3 Jamison, (James^2, James^1), born at Liberty Hall, Essex Co., Va. Mentioned in the will of her grandfather Daniel Gaines, and bequeathed two small Negro girl slaves. She was quick, and active in her movements. Governor Gilmer in his "Early Settlers in Upper Georgia", tells us that she seemed to think if there was not more stir in her family than her husband made, all would go to the dogs. She was constantly in a state of restless anxiety. Her face was drawn to a pucker, by the small pox, which she caught when the British army scattered it through Virginia. On the other hand, we have been told, she was a wonderful woman, dearly beloved by all of her family, and friends. It is very likely that she and her husband Francis Meriwether, who is said to have been one of the best men in the world, were well suited in temperament. The children of this couple will be traced under Meriwethers, Matthews, and Barnetts.

Note;

The Jamison line will be carried out in other families. See this book, some of the branches will not be continued, because they have been written up by other compilers.

MATTHEWS—MATHEWS

John Matthews left the Eastern Shore, Va. and immigrated 1724-7, to what was afterwards Augusta Co., Va. and settled near Natural Bridge, in the fork of the James Riv., in Borden's tract, abt. 1737. In 1742 he was in command of a company of Augusta Militia, and Captain of Militia during the French and Indian War, and in Braddock's Campaign. George^2 Matthews, probably the most prominent of his generation of the Matthews family, b. Augusta Co., Va., 1739, d. 8, 30, 1812. Captain of a company under General Lewis, and was distinguished by his bravery in fighting the Indians. Troops, placed by Congress, on the Continental establishment ordered by General Washington, to join the main army in service at the battles of Brandywine, Germantown, etc. Taken prisoner, sent to British prison ship in the harbor of New York. There he was confined for a long time. He was not exchanged until near the close of the war, when he joined the army under Greene, as Commander of the 3rd Va. Regiment. George Mathews, in 1785, left "Market Hill," his home in Augusta Co., Va. and removed to his large plantation at "Goose Pond", in Wilkes Co., Ga., afterwards Oglethorpe Co. His children and slaves accompanied him. Several of Virginia's finest families, the Freemans, Gilmers, Taliaferros and Barnetts, came to Georgia from Virginia with George Matthews. (See tracings of L. Y. Lipscombe, Rome, Ga.

The Matthews, Reeses, Meriwethers, Barnetts, and Jordan families were most prominent in Jasper Co., Ga.

You will find the name spelled both, Matthews, and Mathews in this sketch. It has been sent to me spelled both ways, and it seems to be a matter of preference with the families themselves as to the form used.

If Mathews find the name spelled with two "t's", it need not offend their idea of accuracy, and vice versa. For going back to earliest records, we find both forms were used by the same family. Merely a matter of preference it seems. Legend; Lord John Mathew, eldest son of Sir David used as a surname, "Mathew", the christian name of his ancestor (1440) using one "t", as spelled in the Welch language. After the family became established in England 1550 two "t's", were adopted in honor of St. Matthew the Scribe.

Anderson of Penley—(Pendley). Sir Henry Anderson, died 1605; Knt. Alderman of London, and Sheriff in 1602; m. Elizabeth, dr. of Sir William Bowyer, Knt.; had issue; 1. Richard Anderson, his heir, m. first, Mary, dr. of Robert, Lord Spencer, of Wormleighton. He died 1653. They had Catherine: m. Sir John Dereham, Knt. Their daughter Elizabeth, m. Thomas Cowley, Esq., of London, d. s. p. Their dr. Frances, m. Robert Needham, Esq., of Therington, Salop. Their dr. Sarah, m. Sir Chas. Wilmot, afterwards Vicount Athelone. Their dr. Mary, m. Sir John Spencer, bart, of Offley. She was the only member of his family to survive Sir Richard Anderson, her brother (Burke's D. and E. Peerage, p. 10.)

Arms; Same as Anderson of Eyworth. Arg. a chev. between three crosses flory sa. Motto—Nil Desperandum Auspice deo.

Our Anderson record begins with Sir Richard[1] Anderson, of Pendley, (Penly) Hertford County, England. On Aug. 3, 1632, he mentioned in his will, pro., 1632; his 2nd son Robert[2], and son Richard, who was a minor at the time. The manor of Pendly in the parishes of Tring and Aldbury, and the manor house in the parish of Tring were sold by Sir Francis Verney to Sir Richard[1] Anderson, Esq., who held court there Anno 5 Jan. 1., and was knighted two years later. Mary, wife of Sir Richard[1] Anderson was a daughter of Robert, Lord Spencer, Baron of Wormleighton, owner of the manor of Althorpe. Who according to the old account books preserved at Althorpe, was a friend and relative of the Washingtons of Sulgrave and Brington. In the will of Sir Richard[1] Anderson, aforementioned, he spoke of himself as "of the county of Hertford," and names this cousin Laurance Washington, of Brase-

Sir Robert Spencer of Wormleighton, Co., Warwick, and of Althorp Co., in Brington, Co., Northampton succeeded his father in family estates (1599), being aged 29. Knight. "Reputed to have by him the most money of any person in the Kingdom." Created 1603 Baron Spencer of Wormleighton. He was sent on especial mission with the Garter to Frederick. Duke of Wurtemburg. Married 1587; Margaret, dr. of Sir Francis Willoughby. Mary dr. of above Sir Robert Spencer, m. Sir Richard Anderson, q. v. (Tracings of Mrs. Julia S. Ardery, Paris, Ky.)

nose, dear and only surviving sister (Mary Anderson) Lady Spencer, to the Rt., Honorable, the Lord Spencer, and others of the name; his second son, Robert, third son, John, and two younger sons, William and Richard, under twenty-one years, and wife Dame Mary, etc. (G. E. C.) For descent of Mary (Spencer) Anderson; see Complete Peerage, V. 7., p. 205.

The Anderson family of Gold Mine Hanover Co., Va., is thought to have descended from Richard[2] Anderson, who at the age of seventeen left England July 4, 1635; embarking in the Transport of London—for Virginia, by the Minister of Gravesend touching their conformitie to the church discipline of England, have taken the oaths of allegiance, Supremis. See Hotten's Immigrants, p. 101.

The record reads as follows: "Richard Anderson aged seventeen, to be transported to Virginia imbarqued in the Transport of London, Mr. Edward Walker, July 4, 1635."

In February 1647, we find Richard Anderson, minister, witnessing the signing of Nicholas Dale's will in York County, Virginia. On March 18, 1662, Richard Anderson received a patent from Sir William Berkeley, Knight, the then Governor of the Colony for 200 acres in Gloucester. It is said that Richard Anderson who patented lands in Gloucester was undoubtedly connected with William Anderson who patented lands in Gloucester and New Kent counties 1668.

In Waters Gleanings in England, V. 1, pp. 365-6, which book deals with records showing connection with early American settlers, we find the will of Sir Richard[1] Anderson, who was by far the most important parisher living in Tring, where he died 1632. His widow Dame Mary (Spencer) Anderson, dr. of Robert, Lord Spencer, afterwards lived in Surrey, but was interred in Tring, 1658. Sir Richard Anderson wrote his will 1630, in which he mentions provision made for his second son, Robert, and third son, John, and two younger sons, William and Richard, both under age, and names son, Henry and daughters.

It would seem quite possible the same William and Richard Anderson of Gloucester, formerly York, who appear in Virginia, Richard having left England 1635, ae 17, soon after the death of Sir Richard, who died 1632, was one of the two younger sons of Sir Richard Anderson, and that probably his brother, William, came also to Virginia. This is further borne out by the fact that the name Robert is found in every generation of the Hanover Co. Andersons, given possibly in honor of Robert, Lord Spencer, and the names, John, Richard, William, and Henry are all found in the Hanover county tax lists.

According to nearly all printed Anderson records, the first Robert Anderson, z, of New Kent County, Virginia* is stated to have been the son of Richard[2] Anderson who left England 1635, aged 17.

Robert^3, the first of the name, was born 1640, d. 1712, aged 72 years. In a deed dated April 16, 1683, (Land Office Bk. 7, p. 272) he was grantee of 727 acres in New Kent for the importation of fifteen persons; and in November 1686, from the Parish Book of New Kent he is shown to have been a vestryman of St. Peters, until the Parish of St. Paul was cut off 1704, in which latter Parish he remained a Vestryman until his death 1712.

He married Cecilia Massie, (Va. Land Office Register) Cecilia (Massie) Anderson, received a grant for 400 acres, N. side Newfound River, beg. at William Rives' upper corner, (Bk. 11, p. 76, Nov. 13, 1721), who is said to have been the daughter of possibly Peter Massie who immigrated from England, and patented land in New Kent County, Va., 1698; who was Vestryman of St. Peter's Church in New Kent, 1708; and Burgess 1723-6; his wife was Lucelia Poindexter, besides Cecilia they had a son Thomas Massie, who married Mary Walker. (See Encyc. Va. Biogs., p. 286.) The Massies were a well known family that appeared in Virginia about the time of arrival of the Richard Anderson, 1635.

z Robert^3 Anderson (Richard^2, Richard^1,) b. about 1640, d. 1712, aged about 72 years; m. Cecilia Massie, had the following issue;

1. Richard, 2. David, 3. Matthew, 4. John, 5. Thos. 6. Nelson, 7. Mary Cecilia, 8. Robert, d. 1716.

John^4 Anderson (Robert^3, Richard^2, Richard^1), in Virginia County Records, by Crozier, for the year 1910, pp. 67-8; we find proof of John Anderson being a son of Robert Anderson. In August 7, 1735, we find Sarah Anderson, widow of John Anderson, late of Hanover Co., Va., Gent. deceased, deeds to John Thomson land, which was conveyed to said John Anderson and wife Sarah, by Samuel Waddy, Jan. 28, 1696.* Samuel Waddy was a Captain 1758; see Henning's Statutes At Large, this may however, have been a son of Samuel Waddy, father of Sarah (Waddy) Anderson, as the date might imply. In the York County records (deed Bk. for yrs., 1694-1697, page 11), we find the deposition of one John Anderson dated 1694 in which he gives his age as 30 years, and on the following page (12) same volume we find the deposition of Bartlott Anderson age 36, dated Apr. 5, 1694.

As one Bartlott Anderson appears in Hanover county at an early date, see Louisa County deeds, Bk. A, p. 323, Bartolett Anderson of Hanover County, Attorney-at-law from Richard Terrill, Aug. 23, 1748, said Bartolett Anderson and Terrill did purchase from Richard Walker and wife Frances, a tract of land in Louisa—and said Terrill desires to sell his portion to said Bartolett Anderson, etc., Wits: James Sims, Nathaniel Garland, there was probably some connection between the Bartlott Anderson of York and the John of York, and this first Bartlott may have been the father of the Bartlott Anderson who married Mary Cosby, and died in Hanover Co., Va., prior to 1764; see Patrick Henry's Account Book, Va. State Library, p. 67. "Mary Anderson, widow of Bartlott Anderson," dated 1764. Though it is not at all certain the aforesaid John Anderson who made the deposition in York was one and the same as the John Anderson, son of the first Robert, who appears later in Hanover, the date of his birth would seem to tie in with this belief, as Robert Anderson was at that time twenty-four years of age.

John Anderson, s. of Robert Anderson first of the name, married Sarah Waddy, and according to established records had a daughter Anne Anderson, who married Capt. David Crawford, 1697. For further information see Crawford sketch, this volume. Other children were:

Capt. John^5 Anderson; m. Mary, dr. of Robert Anderson, III, of St. Martin's Parish, and his wife Elizabeth Clough. Mary Anderson was born 5, 18, 1759.

Robert^4 Anderson, Jr., (Robert^3, Richard^2, Richard^1), d. 1716, aged about fifty-three years. On October 23, 1690, "Robert Anderson, Jr., took over the 727 acres in New Kent, which had been relinquished by his father, for the importation of fifteen persons, and on the same date received 1200 acres for the importation of twenty-four persons. And in 1702, he appears as "Robert, Jr.," a Vestryman in St. Peter's Parish, New Kent. In 1704; on the formation of St. Paul's New Kent County, after 1720 of Hanover Co., Va., he appears as Capt. Robert Anderson, his father as Robert Anderson, Sr. At this time there were but the two Robert Andersons in the Vestries of St. Peter's, and of St. Paul's, and in the deeds. This Captaincy appears to be of a Parish militia, which had its origin about 1612; when the whole colony was an armed camp. *At this time, and long afterwards, we find the Overtons, Garlands, Massies, and others, regular members of St. Paul's Vestry.

Robert^4 Anderson, m. Mary Elizabeth Overton, dr. of William Overton, who was born in England, Dec. 3, 1628? and his wife z Margaret^2 Garland, (Edward^1) who was granddaughter of William Overton, who married Mary Elizabeth Waters, dr. of Ann Waters, of St. Sepulchre, London.

William^1 Overton came from England to Virginia. Mary Elizabeth (Overton) Anderson, d. abt. 1734; she and her husband Robert Anderson, II, had the following children, as shown by the deeds and Parish records of Virginia;

1. Richard, 2. James, 3. Garland, 4. Matthew, 5. David, of Albemarle, Robert of Goldmine. Nathaniel, 8. Charles, 9. John, and possibly two daughters, Charity and Sarah.

Robert^4 Anderson, II, was Justice in New Kent County, 1714. He appears as "Captain Robert Anderson," and his father as Robert Anderson, Sr., who was Captain in the Parish militia, which had its origin 1612.

Overtons:

William Overton, s. of Col. Robert Overton, was a Colonel under Oliver Cromwell, and commanded a brigade of Ironsides, at Dunbar, for some reason he was cast into the Tower of London, by Oliver Cromwell, and died there. He m. Margaret Garland, q. v. married William Overton. She was the dr. of Edward Garland, d. abt. 1719; m. abt. 1680; Jane Jennings, or Hensley; granddaughter of Peter Garland, married prior to 1635, Joane Wilson, daughter of ———Wilson, and his wife Prudence— ——— great, granddaughter of Edward Garland, great, great, granddaughter of Sir John Garland of England. BARNETT

The Barnett family is of English descent. Although several branches came to this country in the early days, the name is still prominent in the old country. Many talented men and women, belong to the Barnett families of England.

The branch of the family that is being traced in this book is thought to have been in Amherst County, Virginia, before 1720. They became allied by marriage with many of the prominent families of the South. Some of the best known were Crawford, Meriwether, Hudson, Marks, McGehees, Gilmers, Micou, Taliaferro, Gresham, Matthews, etc. These families were all numerous in Virginia at an early date, but of later years their long line of descendants are to be found in almost every state in the Union.

Barnetts are listed fifty-six times in the U. S. Census, 1790, in N. C., now their descendants form a large part of the state's population.

This family since early days has been prominent, occupying positions of highest trust and honor. Among them have been many eminent statesmen, lawyers, clergymen, men of letters, and of science, business, and the professions, others ranking high as military officers and Diplomats.

According to the old Virginia Histories Ambrose Barnett came to Isle of Wight County, Virginia, 1632; and other records give the names of Barnett immigrants who came over at an early date. We find in Hotten's Immigrants that John Barnett, aged 26 came to Virginia, in the Jonathan, 1620. Another John Barnett was living on the Eastern Shore of Virginia. 2. 16, 1623. Thomas Barnett, aged 16 came to Virginia, in the Elsabeth 1620. Some of the historians and genealogists, claim that all of the Barnetts in America today trace to a common ancestor, one of the early Virginia immigrants. Of this there is great doubt for the census 1790, gives the names of Barnetts in each of the original colonies. The name is found with great frequency in South Carolina, Kentucky, and Tennessee, and the descendants of these branches are scattered all over the country.

One source of information gives the early ancestor of the branch of the Barnetts to whom we will turn our attention, as Frank Barnett, who married Sukey Johnson. They had seven sons, of whom Nathaniel, m. Lucy Webb, and William, are two. It is further claimed that Nathaniel^2 Barnett and Lucy Webb, had issue, Nathaniel^3 Barnett, m. Susanna Crawford; William^3 died about 1800, Columbia, Georgia, m. ————— Booker, John^3 Barnett, m. Caroline Tindall. The above lineage for Nathaniel, John, and William, has not been verified to the satisfaction of the compiler, and is merely given here as a clue, so that interested readers may have something upon which to base further investigations.

Our tracing begins with Nathaniel Barnett, of English descent, who was born in Amherst County, Virginia, about 1727; married October 17, 1748; Susanna Crawford, b. 1729, daughter of David Crawford, III, and his wife Ann Anderson, a lineal descendant of John Crawford, b. 1600; Ayreshire, Scotland, killed 1676, in Virginia, in Bacon's Rebellion.

One correspondent has informed us that the branch of Barnetts, tracing from Nathaniel Barnett, born Amherst Co., Va., "are lineal descendants of King David, and Solomon of Judah; striking the stem in the line of the present King of England, (George V.) in a common ancestor, Alan, then on to David". He does not give his authority, but the writer has now established the Royal lines of the Barnetts, and of their old world ancestry.

Just before the Revolutionary War, Nathaniel Barnett, with his family, and relatives, the Crawfords, moved from Virginia, to Georgia. Settling first in Wilkes County, some went into Elbert County, others to Washington, and Columbia, soon scattering over the state. We find that many of the pioneers settled on Broad River, in what Governor Gilmer termed as the Goosepond. (See Map).

When the Revolutionary War was declared, William^2 Barnett, and his brother Joel^2, sons of Nathaniel^1 Barnett and Susanna Crawford, fired with the zeal of patriotism, went back to Amherst Co., Va. to enlist as soldiers in the American army. The father Nathaniel Barnett was, himself, brave, obdurate, and courageous, and fearlessly showed his patriotism, and loyalty. The British Troops and sympathizing Tories, drove by their atrocities and murderous warfare, most of the Whigs from upper Georgia. Nathaniel Barnett heading a band of his kinsmen, Crawfords, Barnetts, and Meriwethers, determined to remain, and fight to a finish. During this time he was taken prisoner, and confined in Augusta jail. After suffering a great deal, he was liberated by the Whigs, when General Elijah Clarke attacked Augusta, June 5, 1781, and drove out the Tories. On his release, and feeling himself free, Nathaniel Barnett is said to have leaped into the air, struck his feet together three times, threw his woolen hat aloft, and cried out "liberty forever", three times. Few families suffered more from the persecutions of the invading army, during that period than did the Barnetts.

Nathaniel[1] Barnett, d. Broad River Ga., 1820, at the age of 93 years, he was referred to in the "Life of General James Jackson, of Georgia", p. 184, in a letter dated 9, 1, 1801, "as being an influential man, and a power to be reckoned with." His name is often given in Georgia History, as Nat, and Nathan, the latter way is found in the Soldiers of the Line, (Georgia and Georgia People, by Smith). For the above Revolutionary service, eligibility has been established for membership to the Daughters of the American Revolution.

About the close of the Revolution, 1784, the following kinsmen of Nathaniel[1] Barnett, and his wife, natives of Virginia, moved to Georgia, settling first in Wilkes County; George Matthews, Reuben Jordan, Thomas M. Gilmer, John Gilmer, James McGehee, Joel Barnett, John Bradley, Jonathan Davenport, William Harvie, John Marks, James Marks, Francis Meriwether, Tom McGehee, James Bradley, and a number of others, all of whom located on Broad River, establishing homes, on what was called the Goose Pond. (Ga. Landmarks, Knight. V. 1, p. 843.)

Others settling in Georgia about this time were, Colonel Micajah Williamson, Benjamin Taliaferro, Thomas Meriwether, David Meriwether, William Barnett, Joel Crawford, John Gilmer, Thomas Meriwether Gilmer, John Calloway, Nathaniel Edge, another John Marks, Nathaniel Barnett, Micajah McGehee, Daniel Harvie, Jackson, Benjamin, Walter, and Charles Tate.

The following relatives of the Barnetts settled in Columbia, Georgia; Capt. Thomas Cobb, Capt. Charles Crawford, Dr. Nathan Crawford, Hon. Peter Crawford, Major Joel Crawford, the Waltons, et al. Items of interest concerning the above families will be found elsewhere, in this book.

William[2] Barnett (Nathaniel[1]), was b. Amherst Co., Va., where he lived until about 1770. When he moved with his parents and relatives, the Crawfords, etc., to Georgia. Here he lived until the breaking out of the Revolution, when he returned to Amherst County, Virginia, to enlist as a soldier. He received the rank of Captain, and served under Marquis de LaFayette, until the end of the war. He returned to Georgia about 1784, and became one of the most prominent men in the state.

He was President of the Georgia Legislature, for many years, a member of Congress, the 12th and the 15th; was appointed a member of the Commission about 1815, to establish the boundaries of the Creek Indian Reservation. Was one of the Committee for the Revision of the Constitution 1798. (Steven's Hist. of Ga., V. 1, p. 501.) He was elected to Congress to succeed Howell Cobb 1811-1813, from Georgia, others elected the same year were William Wyatt Bibb, (Howell Cobb resigned,) Bolling Hall, George M. Troupe; 12th Congress. For the 13th Congress 1813-1815; William Barnett, elected to succeed Hon. Wm. H. Crawford, U. S. Senator, Alfred Cuthbert, elected to succeed Wm. Wyatt Bibb, resigned, 1813; John Forsyth, Bolling Hall, Thomas Telfair, George M. Troupe. Ga. Landmarks—Knight. V. 2.

William[2] Barnett also studied medicine, and became a fine doctor, his services were given freely to the poor. He was made Sheriff of his county. Later was sent to the General Assembly, for a number of years; became President of the Senate 1812. When Howell Cobb resigned from Congress, Dr. William Barnett was a candidate against the celebrated John Forsyth, one of the great men of Georgia History, and whose reputation was afterwards national, and international. Dr. Wm.[2] Barnett ran as a States Rights man, and a Democrat, and evidence of his popularity is to be found in the fact that he defeated Forsyth.

Immediately after the close of the session of the 13th Congress Mar. 2, 1815. Dr. William[2] Barnett was appointed by President Madison, a member of the Indian Reservation Commission.

Capt. (Dr.) William[2] Barnett's service in the Revolution, has been established for eligibility, for the Daughters American Revolution. See Meriwether Gen. NSDAR—Nat. Nos. q. v.

And he joined in the general exultation of his countryman, when they knew that the struggle for freedom had been won William's brother Joel[2] Barnett was with him, and served as a soldier". See later.

Capt. William[2] Barnett (Dr.) lived at various times in Washington, and Wilkes Co., Ga. It was said of him that he was the most popular man in his community. He was kind, plausible, and agreeable. Nathaniel Barnett returned to Alabama for his family, and was accompanied on his second trip to Arkansas by the families of Hudsons, Barnetts, McDaniels, Chownings, etc. Most of these settled within the territory of the original purchase, and their descendants now form an important part of the population of that section of the State. Nathaniel Barnett was one of the County Commissioners to lay out the City of Warren, Arkansas, which was located in 1842; thirty acres was donated by his son-in-law John H. lications. On February 18, 1913, he was appointed Vice, and Deputy Consul in the American Consular Service at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. In 1920 he was Consul to Greece; official representative of the United States, in Athens; in 1914 he was sent to Karlsbad, Austria, where he stayed until America was requested to withdraw her representatives, then he went to Athens, Greece. While in Karlsbad he assisted more than five hundred Americans, British, and French, to leave the enemy's country, among others Adelina Patti, her husband, Count Von Cedarstorm, several British Lords, and ladies, and the Dequa Maharadja, of Barodo. When in Athens, he performed some valuable service for the Greek government, and was knighted by King Alexander, who became a personal friend, as did all of his Royal family, including King Constantine's brothers, Princes Nicholas, and Christopher, (who married Mrs. Leeds, the American heiress). Prince Nicholas gave him apartments in his palace for two years, attended by the Palace retainers, and served with the silver and napery, of the Grand Duchess, Helene of Russia, Prince Nicholas' wife.

Mr. Waller remained in the Consular service in Athens, until transferred to Kobe, Japan, 11, 1920. See Herringshaw's American Blue Book of Biography, pub. 1914. Men of 1913. State Capitol of Alabama.

(a) Lieutenant Luther Hill Waller, of Montgomery, Alabama, was born on the old Waller place, now the site of the Memorial Hospital, 9, 5, 1898, grandson on the paternal line of William Waller, and Margaret Armstrong Stout. His parents, and his ancestors on the maternal side, have lived in Montgomery Co., Ala. since before the admission of the state into the Union.

His great great grandfather Col. Benjamin Taliaferro was an officer of distinction in the Revolutionary War, and three other ancestors fought in that conflict. Other ancestors in the war of 1812, and the Mexican War. His father was only two years old at the time of the War Between the States, but both grandfathers served Alabama, in the conflict, to the limit of their ability, in their several capacities; both being too old to serve in the army.

Lt. Luther Waller was educated in the Public Schools, of Montgomery, Barnes School, and at Woodberry Forest School, near Orange, Va., where he graduated with high honors. He then went to the University of Virginia, where he took a high stand in his studies. He is a member of the Sigma Nu Fraternity, was a member of the Univ. of Va. Glee Club.

Although not twenty-one years old at the time war was declared, Luther Waller, entered the Officer's Training School, at McPherson Fort, Ga.. on account of his extreme youth he experienced great difficulty in being admitted, but was graduated with the first company, and duly commissioned 2nd Lt.; he was sent almost immediately to Camp Gordon, where he remained in service until his division, the 82nd, proceeded to France, May, 1918; from the time he landed he was almost continuously under fire, until seriously wounded Oct. 8, 1918; he received three other wounds; he fought in the defensive sector, near Metz, and in the sector north of Toul, and played an important part in the St. Mihiel, and Argonne battles, which are told in his four citations, and the award of the highest recognition in the power of the United States, the distinguished service Cross.

Lt. Luther Waller was four times cited, and decorated, with the D. S. C.; he is now Captain, and Assistant Adjutant General of Alabama, "an unique and exceptionally dramatic occurrence of the war, was staged just north of Cornay, when Lt. Waller was so seriously wounded on Oct. 8, 1918; he had the rare satisfaction seldom accorded to fighters in these days of killing, of himself dispatching the man who would have killed him. The German soldier less than one hundred feet from him refused to surrender, and fired, it was one life, or the other, and Lt. Waller though wounded by the first shot, shot his adversary before he could fire again. He then administered first aid, and carried the German to a place of safety, the enemy died, however, before reaching the dressing station."

Lt. Waller's citations read, Hdq. 82nd Div., American E. F., France, January 13, 1919; First Lieut. Luther H. Waller, 328 Inf. On September 15, 1918; Lt. Waller successfully led his platoon in the advance from Norroy, France to Vandierres, France, although constantly subject to heavy machine gun fire, he gained his objective, and although his platoon had lost heavily, by his coolness, and disregard of personal danger, he organized his position and held it. He rescued Colonel Pike, who was mortally wounded, and administered first aid to him, and three other soldiers under heavy shell fire. His personal attitude contributed very materially to the success of the operation.

The Commanding General takes particular pride in announcing to the command these fine examples of courage, and self-sacrifice. Such deeds are evidence of that spirit of heroism, which is innate in the highest type of the American soldier, and responds unfailingly to the call of duty, wherever, and whenever it may come.

This order will be read to all organizations, at the first formation after its receipt.

By Command of Maj. Gen'l Duncan Gordan Johnson, Chief of Staff; Official R. L. Boyd, Maj. A. G. D., Adj. (Seal) Hdq. 82nd Div.

A true copy of the sealed original is in the possession of Lt. Waller.

JOEL[2] BARNETT

Joel[2] Barnett, the youngest son of Nathaniel Barnett, especially distinguished himself by his daring adventures during the Revolutionary War. He and his brother William, and two of the Crawford boys, to avoid being burnt in the houses of their fathers, or captured and hung, took possession of a thicket of cedars, which grew near the center of a great extent of otherwise bare rocks, some miles from Augusta, Ga. From this place they could see the approach of enemies, prepare for flight, or fight, and choose the most favorable time for breaking up lodgments of the Tories.

During this siege he once crossed Savannah river, into Edgefield

JOEL BARNETT

District, S. C., where the Tories had the upper hand at the time, and burned the tippling house, in which they were accustomed to assemble before going forth to plunder, and murder. He was tarrying to see the fire under way, when he heard a party of tories making for the place in the greatest haste. He mounted his horse and fled. There was no fort, nor friends, near to give him protection. The British, and their allies were in possession of Augusta, the only place where a boat could be had for crossing the Savannah river. It was a life and death run on the part of Barnett. With the odds against him. When Joel Barnett reached the river he plunged in. Lying on the water he struck manfully out for the other shore. He had got just beyond gunshot when the Tories arrived at the Bank. They discharged a volley of shot at him, but he was beyond their reach.

Joel Barnett's health gave way from constant exposure. Reduced to feebleness by fever and ague, he sought relief by taking shelter in the cabin of a poor Whig woman near by. One morning he saw a party of Tories rapidly approaching. He passed out of the house on the opposite side, climbed over a fence, and dropped into some weeds, and tall grass on the other side, this concealed him, and he heard the curses of his enemies, and their threats of vengeance upon the woman who had sheltered him. As soon as they passed on, Joel reclimbed the fence, passed through the cabin, and was off in the opposite direction from that taken by the Tories. The foregoing is taken from Gilmer's Early Settlers of Upper Georgia. pp. 130-50, 139 inclusive.

JOEL² BARNETT, of Virginia and Georgia

Joel² Barnett (Nathaniel¹), born Amherst County, Virginia, and spent his youth in that county, going with his parents and relatives, to Georgia, just before the breaking out of the Revolution. Being a true patriot, he at the age of 14 years accompanied his elder brother William Barnett, back to Amherst County, Va. where they both enlisted in Militia in the American Army. He served under Marquis de LaFayette, and was in the siege of Yorktown. He saw the British Commander in Chief surrender his sword, to an American Officer. At the age of nineteen he was made an Officer, and bravely performed his duties. Was a famous soldier, and partisan, in the struggle for Independence. At his death he was worth $150,000.

When the Militia was called out to go to Yorktown, 1781; he told "Grandpa Crawford", that if he would let him have his rifle, he would take his place. And said if he lived he would return it. He then joined LaFayette's army, near Richmond, Virginia, and was in the closing battles of the Revolution. He was said to be one of the bravest of the brave. That old rifle remained in the family for years, and it is thought that David Jacobs, (s. of Sarah Crawford, and John Jacobs) bought it as a keepsake. Joel Barnett was Joel Barnett, went with his father Nathaniel Barnett, and his brother William Barnett, from Columbia County, Ga. to their old home Amherst County, Va. where they enlisted in the militia of Amherst County, Va. Joel was at that time only fourteen years old, but determined to do a man's work in the war of freedom. With the daring of youth he distinguished himself frequently during the great struggle, see elsewhere this volume. On Flag Day, June 14, 1924 the Daughters American Revolution Chapter Hic-a sha-ba-ha, of Starksville, Miss., placed a bronze marker on his grave. This beautiful marker is in the shape of a maltese cross, surrounded by a wreath of laurel leaves, has at the top "S. A. R.", at the bottom "1776" Newspaper clipping, of the Marking of Joel Barnett's Grave.

After the Revolution he returned to Georgia, and settled in Oglethorpe County; he was a planter, and became a very prominent man, and was respected by all who knew him. He served in the Georgia Legislature from Oglethorpe County, for several years, or rather terms. He served in one campaign against the Seminole Indians, on the Florida and Georgia line, with his brother, Capt. William^{2} Barnett, and his cousin Nathan Crawford Barnett; see q. v.

The family Bible of Joel^{2} Barnett is still in existence, and from it is taken the dates of births, deaths and marriages, of his parents, and his children. years, came out a Captain at the age of 21, a Revolutionary Officer noted for his bravery, and courage.

The subject of this sketch was educated in Franklin College, Athens, Georgia, during the Presidency of Dr. Waddell. One of his associates in this school was the son of the President, afterwards, Dr. John Waddell, for a time Chancellor of the University of Mississippi, another was Dr. John Gray, President of LaGrange College, Tenn.

While Mr. Barnett was in Franklin College he was converted, and joined the Presbyterian Church, but later when he studied theology in earnest for himself he could in no wise receive the doctrine of Calvin, and at once became an ardent member of the Methodist Church.

About 1853, Charles^{3} Barnett, and his father Joel^{2} Barnett, moved from Georgia to Montgomery, Ala., thence to Noxubee County, Miss. where they settled in the rich prairie belt in that county, he became a planter, and lived here for nearly half a century. By temperate habits, frugal expenditures, and commendable attention to z Centennial Vol. of Mississippi Methodism, written by Rev. W. S. Harrison, S. W. Missouri Conf. Western Dist.?

*Nathaniel^4 Barnett enlisted in Cavalry a few months after the beginning of the Civil War, and fought through until the last battle, when he met his death.

One Joel Ponder is said to have lived at Camden, Ark. Have been unable to locate any of his branch of the family.

Notes on the Charles^3 Barnett family, taken from the family Bible.

In reading Gilmer's Georgians, one is impressed with this book as a historial contribution to the State of Georgia. Its value as a genealogical and Biographical record, is undoubted, but the book would have been just as great, just as interesting, just as true, and a great deal more appreciated, by the descendants of the families whom he saw fit to record had he not given vent to an unkind grudge, or frankness towards his friends, kinsmen, and neighbors. One find themselves sympathizing with the parties, as he pictured them, and resenting the liberty he took with families who stood high in culture, refinement, and wealth, all of them aristocratic, and high-toned citizens of Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi.

Gilmer's Georgians, "Early Settlers of Upper Georgia," is a rare book, almost out of print, and an accepted authority, a memorial to the author's caustic pen, and uncharitable thoughts.

*Miss Mary Eleanor Timberlake, has been untiring in her assistance to the writer, in collecting family data along this, and many other lines. Her help and encouragement have been an inspiration, that has seemed at times to put new zest into the work, and to have lifted some of the burden from the mind of a sometimes, weary, and nerve-wracked compiler. And to her, we are indeed grateful. It has been said of Miss Timberlake that she is a most amiable, and lovely character, graced in all of those traits that go to make a lovely woman.

Washington, D. C.
February 15, 1815.

My dear Relative;

I have just received yours of the 3rd inst., and am truly sorry you should have imbibed the idea that I had suffered my mind to be influenced by anything which has grown out of a difference of opinion between you and myself, on the subject of politics. I trust I am too well acquainted with my own frailties to judge others for mere matters of opinion.

I am too sensible of the various causes which may honestly produce that effect. I hope therefore that you will not indulge for a moment any such impression. The impression which was made on my mind towards your parents, and every child they had, in the days of my adversity will ever be remembered with the most pleasing sensation, and that would require more than ordinary things to erase them. True it is I may not have corresponded with them in a manner which they may have thought I ought to have done, but to this I can say my early habits were not formed with a pen, nor is my partiality for it great at this time of life, and I am often forced into a use of it, at this place against my will.

I have promised myself to call on you every time I have passed, and thought certainly to have done so last spring, but have always found it would place me in a situation to travel a great distance alone. My intention is at this time to set out from here on Friday week to see your father, but fear I cannot come to your house, it will require more time than I can possibly spare, and be too severe on my horses.

I most sincerely wish to see you, and the family, which I fear I never shall except on this occasion, I presume it will be 30 miles out of my way, were it not for the badness of the roads, I would attempt it.

You have not mentioned my dear old Aunt, I hope she is alive. Give her my love, as well as your lady and family. Surely I had like to forget to congratulate you on the subject of Peace. The Treaty is now before the Senate, and will receive their sanction, as honorable to the Nation.

I am, sincerely your friend,

Wm Barnett

Nathaniel Barnett, enlisted in Noxubee County, Miss., 1862; fought in Middle Tennessee, under Van Dorn, but later under Chalmers and Forest, in North Mississippi; he was once wounded in some skirmish. He was a private, and was with his regiment, 1st Mississippi Cavalry, at Selma, Alabama, where he was killed; he was buried by Northern soldiers, with others of his command, in the vicinity of Selma, where his body still lies.

Nicholas^4 V. Barnett, (Nathaniel^3, William^2, Nathaniel^1), under Capt. Wm. Barnett's descendants. He enlisted as private in a company of Confederate soldiers, recruited in Bradley Co., Ark., was later made Quarter Master, in what was known as Hindman's Brigade, in which capacity he served until the end of the war. He was captured while on a visit to his family, and was taken to Pine Bluff, Ark., was later exchanged. Letters written to his wife tell much of his experiences. His second wife Olive Matthews* was educated in Mississippi, graduating from Hernando College, in 1857. When the Confederate soldiers recruited from that part of Bradley County, were leaving for service, Olive Matthews* was selected to make the farewell address in the Court Square, at Toledo, Ark. Phinizy—From Notable Southern Families—Armstrong.

Ferdinand Phinizy, first of the name in America, was of Italian descent. He immigrated to this country in the eighteenth century; married Margaret Condow; established his home in Georgia and acquired great wealth and left one of the greatest fortunes in Georgia, and probably in the South. He had five children, of whom John married Martha Cresswell. They had 9 children. Their eighth child Mary Eliza Phinizy, married William Henry Micou; she survived her husband, and lived in Montgomery, Alabama.

Notable Southern Families, contains other very interesting data concerning the Phinizy Family; also a portrait of Ferdinand Phinizy, the first.

CRAWFORD

Research reveals the fact that the Crawford family is an ancient one, of great prominence, and historic distinction, with as interesting and romantic history as one could wish.

It is said on good authority that the Crawfords descend from Mackornock, who distinguished himself by the water of Cree, in Galloway, by discovery of a ford, or pass, and thus gained a decided advantage for his side, in a fierce battle of the olden time, which won them a victory.

We find in the Journal of American History, that the family traces back to Leofwine, who was born probably not later than the year 1000; and lived in that part of England, known at that time, as Northumberland. His son Thor Longus, with other leaders, was expelled from Northumberland, or left voluntarily, to join the armies of the King of Scotland, against King William, his settling in Scotland is believed to have been between the years of 1069-1074. Thor Longus had a son Swane, his descendant Sir John Crawford, d. 1248, had a daughter, who married David de Lindsay, s. of William, about 1230, and it was through this marriage that the Earldom of Crawford came to the Lindsays.

The Crawfords were closely allied with the Bruces, and Wallaces, in the early days, and a few hundred years later, Mary, Queen of Scots, found the Crawfords among her most faithful and loyal friends.

The beginning of the pedigree of the Crawfords of Kilburney, descending from the Crawford of Crawford John, has been rather difficult to trace. John Crawford, first of Kilburney, and descended from the Crawfords of Crawford John, appears to have been living about the middle of the thirteenth century, his son Sir Reginald de Crawford, was a staunch adherent of Robert Bruce, who gave him lands in Cunninghame, that had belonged to John Baliol. From the above family descends one branch of the Virginia Crawfords, to whom we will later turn our attention.

This name which has been so prominent in the chronicles of Scottish History, and which has received such honorable mention, in the American Archives, from the century of the settlement in this country presents many variations and has been spelled in many different ways, as Crawford, Craufurd; Craufurde, Crawfurd, as will be found in the records of the old country. In America it may be found in the old land grants, deeds, wills, and state and county, records, as Craford, Crafford, Crufford, and Crawford, Crofut, and Crawfoot, and frequently pronounced as if spelled "Crofford". The name is Anglo-Saxon, although the family was Scottish, there were parishes in Scotland by the name of Crawford, and numerous counties in the United States bear the name.

We find that the Crawford family was, and is very prolific records show that they were in America from the early days. In each state along the Atlantic coast, the Crawfords cast their lot, on landing in the land of promise. In Virginia there seems to have been two different branches of the family, that do not, as far as we can trace, claim a common ancestor in this country, there was evidently a tie of kinship in the Scottish families—and a lineal descent.

All of us have heard the expression, and used it repeatedly, "our ancestors were Scotch-Irish," thinking that it meant that our Scotch forebears had intermarried with natives of Ireland, and that the mingling of the two races had given us the hyphenated term. Mr. Hanna in his treatise on the Scotch-Irish says that such is not the case, that the Scotch people with loyalty to Scotland kept to the Scotch people, and they were called "Scotch-Irish", from purely geographical reasons, and not from any union of the two nationalities. Those of us who have boasted of our Scotch-Irish ancestry, will be interested to know that we are Scotch, pure and simple, and Irish because Ireland was their land by adoption, and the "providence of God". Even with Mr. Hanna as authority, we daresay that it is highly probable that there were some intermarriages of the Scotch and Irish, for how could all of those sturdy Scotchmen have resisted the winsome Irish lassies.

Fairbairn's Crests give numerous Crests, for Crawfords, Craufurds, Crufurds, etc.; some of which are very pretty and attractive.

The ancient Scottish family from which our Virginia branch of Crawfords are descended were distinguished in the Annals of History. They were noted for their great strength of mind and body, for fearlessness, and bravery in time of war, and influence in time of peace. Masters of every situation in which they found themselves, honest, loyal, and straightforward, in dealings and conduct, and intolerant of the lack of these qualities in others.

It is very probable that the Crawfords trace to the Douglass's of Scotia, with a strain of such noble blood as that of old Angus. There is yet a Crawford Moor in Scotland, and there are still in existence vaulted caverns in which not only cattle were driven, but families sought refuge from the cruelty of the enemy. It was this persecution, and distress, that caused many to seek peace and freedom, in the new country.

In a "Scotch Peerage", a work published by George Crawford, 1716; he has given a Latin epigram on the armorial bearings of the Crawfords, of Kilburnie in Ayrshire, one of whom was created Viscount Garnock, by Queen Anne, in the second year of her reign. The description is as follows; and the arms have been sacredly handed down from the first John Crawford, in Virginia; it is the same as that ascribed to the Crufurd of Scotland.

seat of the great house of Crawford, stands on the right side of River Clyde.

The Crawfords were Caledonians, and derived their lineage from the old Earls of Richmond. Reginald, youngest son of Allan, fourth Earl of Richmond, was the extreme ancestor of the Crawfords. He was sirnamed "The Good", and was heritable Sheriff of Ayr, an office long held in the family. He inherited Ardlock.

Reginald de Crawford, The Good, was gr. gr. father of Margaret, who married Malcolm Wallace, and became the mother of Scotland's immortal hero, Sir William Wallace. Thomas Crawford on April 2, 1578, captured from Sir James Fleming, Dunbarton Castle, at that time deemed impregnable, and the family crest was put on the wall, commemorative of this event.

Kilburnie Castle and Kirk were ancient possessions of the family. The Kirk especially attracts, because on the front gallery are emblazoned the armorial bearings of twelve families with whom the Crawfords were allied. (From D. A. R. Magazine.)

JOHN CRAWFORD, OF VIRGINIA, 1600-1676

John[1] Crawford, born Ayrshire, Kilburney, Scotland, 1600; settled in James City County, Virginia, removed to St. Peter's Parish; having come to that state in or about 1643. He died 1676. He is thought to have been a lineal descendant of Quintin Craufurd, of Kilburney, on the West Sea of Scotland, and traced back to Reginald, youngest son of Alan, 4th. Earl of Richmond. It is said that Reginald accompanied David 1st. to the North, and received extensive grants of land in Strath Cluy, at Clyesdale, where his immediate descendants adopted the name as it is. The first spelling was Craufurd, signifying "the pass of blood", from Cru, bloody, and furd, a pass, or way, commemorating possibly some terrific struggle with Aborigines.

Scottish History is full of thrilling incidents, showing the attitude taken by those zealous leaders of public opinion, against the aggressions of England, and in foreign wars. The Crawfords were notably brave, they were generally of large stature, sinewy, and of splendid physique, and great endurance, square chins, blonde complexions, prominent noses, public spirited, clannish. In America the family retain the same characteristics, and have been prominently before the people, as statesmen, politicians, warriors, scientists, etc., many have held public offices of high distinction.

John[1] Crawford is supposed by some historians to have been an ardent supporter of the House of Stuarts, and that after the execution of Charles, he joined the Cavalier expedition to Jamestown, Va., to escape the rigors of persecution, which marked the Puritan Commonwealth under Cromwell.

John^1 Crawford was killed in Bacon's Rebellion, 1676, aged 76 yrs., he brought with him to Virginia, in or about 1643; an only son David Crawford, the father was a widower, when he left Scotland, and we have no record of a marriage in this country. These two Crawfords, progenitors of one branch of the family, in Virginia, settled either in James City County or in New Kent County.

The cost of a passage from England to Virginia, 1649, was 5lbs 10s, and 3 extra if the vessel stopped at St. Catherine's for five or six weeks.

It has been supposed that John^1 Crawford had no other son than David, but it might be that the John Crawford, of Northumberland who sold his land there in 1706; was another son, there is an account of the burial place of this John C., and his wife, in the public record.

Beech Creek, Ford. He and his family, moved about 1750-2 to Albemarle Co., afterwards to Amherst Co., in which year he bought 411 a. of land from Robert Barnett, afterward he bought two other tracts of less than 100 a. each, the last in 1758. One of these lots of land was perhaps purchased by Capt. David^{3} Crawford, who followed his son to that section of the country, and in his will of 1762, left his plantation, then in Amherst Co., and 280 acres adj., to his granddaughter Mrs. Susanna Barnett, wf. of Nathaniel Barnett. The next deed recorded in Albemarle County was to David^{4} Crawford, 1760, by Landon Hughes, conveying 400 a. Ann (Anderson) Crawford, died probably 1803, when Nelson Anderson and Nathan Crawford signed a bond as executors of the estate of Ann Crawford; she was aged ninety-five years at the time of her death.

*The father of Fanny Harris, who married Joel Crawford, seems to be much in doubt. I have three different men, from three different printed sources, all considered very reliable. We find in Crawford Gen. by Vanderbilt, that he was Christopher Harris. In Ab. Com. Am. Gen. V. 5, p. 709; he is given as Major Robert Harris, m. 1720, Mourning Glenn. And still further, an accepted D. A. R. (Daughters American Revolution) paper, gives him as "Benjamin Harris, who m. Mourning Glenn, b. 1732; d. 1812, fought in the early wars. Lt. in the Revolution, from Greenville County, Va., where he was born and died."

From Boston Transcript, May 5, 1924; David Crawford, b. in Scotland, abt. 1625, came with his father John Crawford to America, 1643, floated down the Ohio riv. to Illinois. (Compiler's note. This is the first time this version has come to our notice.)

DESCENDANTS OF JOEL^{5} CRAWFORD AND FANNY HARRIS

William^{6} Harris Crawford, sixth child of (Joel^{5}, David^{4}, Capt. David^{3}, David^{2}, John^{1}), was born Amherst County, Va., 2. 24. 1772; he went with his parents, in 1779 to Edgefield District, S. In 1799, William Harris Crawford moved to Oglethorpe Co., Ga. and settled in the town of Lexington; he established his country seat at Woodlawn, some three miles distant, where his grave is still to be seen, and the location is marked by the town of Crawford. When living in Columbia Co., Ga. he spent most of his time with his kinsman, Capt. William Barnett, of Broad River, Elbert County, an eminent statesman and politician.

Mr. Crawford was, himself, a leading lawyer, statesman and politician, and is said to have had the greatest intellect of his time. After his father's death, William taught school awhile, and then returned to school, and studied law: in 1806, he was elected Senator, at the age of 34, for two terms, he was appointed in 1799, in conjunction with H. Marbury, to digest the laws of Georgia, elected member of the Georgia Legislature, for several successive years, and was soon considered one of the great men of that most select of the legislative bodies of that day. He was Minister to France for two terms, during Monroe's administration; was Secretary of War, and afterwards Secretary of the Treasury, under Monroe, he had acquired influence and prestige, he was nominated for President of the United States, in opposition were Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, and John Quincy Adams. Before the election Wm. Crawford suffered a stroke of paralysis, and he was compelled to retire from public life, his nomination for President was the first and only time that a Georgia Statesman was so signally honored.

During his canvass for United States Senator Wm. H. Crawford fought a duel with Peter Van Allen, lawyer, his antagonist fell mortally wounded, he also fought a duel with George Clark, and was himself seriously wounded; was re-elected U. S. Senator 1811; in 1825 he was again tendered the position in John Quincy Adams' cabinet, which he declined, he returned to his home at the end of Monroe's Term, in 1825, and in 1827, was made Judge of the Northern Circuit of Georgia, this office, he held up to the time of his death. He was the greatest man in Georgia's History.

Col. Wm. H. H. Crawford, on his way to court, in Elbert County, Ga., of which he was Judge of the Northern Circuit, was taken ill at the home of Valentine Meriwether, on Saturday night, and died until 1877. In the next year he began to study law, and was admitted to the Bar in 1881. In 1883 he was elected as a democrat to the Arkansas State Senate, and served until 1891. He always demonstrated his ability for public service. Was a leader in educational circles, and one of the foremost members of the legal profession in the State. No man in Pine Bluff commanded greater esteem of confidence. On Dec. 14, 1882, Mr. Crawford married Miss Martha Virginia Hudson, dr. of James Asbury Hudson, of Jefferson Co. They made their home in Pine Bluff.

Mr. and Mrs. Crawford were members of the First Presbyterian Church, for many years. he being an elder. His death occurred Jan. 23, 1928. Mrs. Crawford died July 29, 1923. She and her husband gave largely of their money, and time to church and charity, and it was due entirely to her efforts that the Davis Hospital was established in Pine Bluff. On May 13, 1928, a large oil portrait of Mrs. Crawford, painted for the purpose, was presented, and unveiled in a program held at Davis Hospital, this in commemoration of her untiring and enthusiastic service as President of the Institution for a quarter of a century. The unveiling took place in the presence of a large number of citizens. At the hour of her funeral as much honor was shown her, as was to President Harding whose funeral was at the same time. Stores closed, street cars stopped, and other tributes were given; she was called "Pine Bluff's most loved woman, "because of her wide spread charity and loving service for others. A double avenue of Chinese Elms—on Cherry Street Rd. were planted in her memory. M. D. P.

MERIWETHER COAT OF ARMS

MERIWETHER

The Meriwethers a prolific family of great prominence, have already been traced at length, in three special books of their own. And scores of sketches have appeared in genealogies. and American histories. Because of this the compiler is centering on only a limited number of the descendants of Nicholas^2 Meriwether (Nicholas^1 Meriwether)* d. 12. 19. 1678?, and his wife Elizabeth Crawford. The name is spelled both, Meriweather and Meriwether, both are correct. But for a matter of convenience, the name will appear in this volume as Meriwether.

Nicholas^2 Meriwether, b. 10. 26,1667; m. Elizabeth ^{3}Crawford. He was born in Surry County, Va.; moved to James City Co., Va. at an early age, and resided there as late as June 3, 1699; as shown by a power of Attorney given his bro-in-law Francis Clements, of Surry Co., Va. Nicholas^2 Meriwether, m. 1688, at the age of twenty-one years. One or more of his children were born in James City Co., Va. Then he moved to New Kent Co., Va. where he was living,

In compiling this list of authorities, some that have been consulted may have been unintentionally omitted. There are a few on the list, that the compiler has not consulted, but which are placed here as suggestion to persons interested in Crawfords not included in this sketch, and not members of this branch of the Crawford family.

1693. Here his other children were born, as shown by the St. Peter's Parish Register, where they were recorded.

In 1733-34 he was a resident of St. Martin's Parish, in Hanover Co., Va., after that county was cut off from New Kent. He moved from Hanover County to Goochland Co. in which he resided, 1738-40; that portion of the county in which he lived was cut off, and formed Albemarle Co., Va. He was a member of the House of Burgesses from Hanover County, 1710-14-23[9]. He died in the fall of 1744. Will recorded in Deed Bk., No. 4, p. 437, in Goochland County Court House.

The Meriwethers claim that their ancestry dates back to the Norman Conquest, A.D., 1066. Family tradition which has been handed down for more than 300 years, gives us much interesting history concerning them. From that source we learn that Nicholas[1] Meriwether had a large land grant in the colony of Virginia, from Charles II, of England, in payment of a money loan. And we have proof that his three sons came at an early date to Virginia, and took possession of his landed estate, this loan was made his Majesty, before the Restoration.

The sons of Nicholas[1] Meriwether, who are said to have come to Virginia, from Wales, or England, were Nicholas, Francis and David. The two other sons, William and Thomas, probably did not come until a later date. We find the name of William, Nicholas Jr., Nicholas, David, and Francis, in numerous grants of record between 1664, and 1738, many of them being in New Kent County, Va.

There are on record in the Virginia land registry office, between the years 1652-1656-1664, patents to the extent of 5,250 acres in Westmoreland Co. Virginia, to Nicholas Meriwether. From the dates, it must have been Nicholas[1] Meriwether.

Nicholas Meriwether, of the second generation, had a grant from the Crown of nearly 20,000 acres. A Virginia Land Registry book records a grant of 400 acres, February 18, 1722, Hanover Co., Va., to Nicholas Meriwether, "gent". He and others of his family also had land in the counties of New Kent, Goochland, Louisa and Spottsylvania.

The name Meriwether has few variations, it is sometimes spelled with two "rr's" and sometimes with an "a" as in weather, spell it as you may, the name means a heritage of honor, and all descend from the old, and illustrious, family who as far as we know originated in Wales.

The following armorial is ascribed to the Meriwethers of this country.

"To avoid the oppression of the Government, during the persecution of the people of Wales, during the reign of Charles II, the Meriwethers young and unmarried fled to America, settling in the colony of Virginia. Frankness and sincerity kept them from being formalists, and because of their good sense they were not bigoted. They were neither Catholics nor Episcopalians in Wales. Nor did they embrace the government form of religion adhered to in the colonies, or rather in the Old Dominion. As long as coercion was used they were apparently indifferent, or atheistic, or non-believers. After the Revolution when liberty gave to every man the right to worship God according to his belief most of them were noted for their piety and Christian work."

The Meriwethers, although proud were without vanity, "and no one ever looked at, or talked to one of them, but he heard, or saw something to make him look, or listen again." (Gilmers Georgians.)

The first land patents were taken out on June 16, 1727. On that day Nicholas^2 Meriwether obtained a grant of 13,762 acres, at the first ledge of Mountains called "Chestnutt", and said to be on the same line. These locations occurred in the line of the South Anna River, up which the increasing population had been slowly creeping for a number of years. This patent included the present seat of "Castle Hill," and the boundaries of Grant as it was termed by way of eminence, were marks of great notoriety to surveyors and others interested in the description of adjacent lands for a long period afterwards. The same year Nicholas^2 Meriwether located 4,190 acres more, adjoining his former tract, and running over the S. W. Mountain, on Turkey Run.

He was granted 1,020 acres west of the Rivanna, embracing the plantation known as the farm. He was a church warden and vestryman of Fredericksville Parish.

The three Meriwether brothers brought more wealth with them to Virginia than was usual for immigrants in the 17th century.

The following coat of arms is probably a modification of the one granted to Richard Meriwether in the 16th century for wisdom in battle.

In Virginia where the family first landed when they came over from the old world, few are left, their descendants having scattered over other parts of the country.

Ni: Meriwether

Col. David^3 Meriwether (s. of Nicholas^2) known in after life as "Col. David," married Anne Holmes. He was buried on the east bank of the Rivanna River, near his father, Nicholas^2 Meriwether.

Thomas Jefferson said of Col. Nicholas^5 Meriwether, (s. of Thomas^4, and wf. Elizabeth Thornton), that he was the most sensible man he ever knew. And Wm. H. Crawford made the same remark about Francis^5 Meriwether, brother of Col. Nicho^5—they were sons of Elizabeth Thornton, who belonged to one of the most respectable, untitled families of England. His intimate friends show his rank in society, the executors of his will were Peter Jefferson, father of Pres. Thomas Jefferson, John Thornton, Joshua Fry, Dr. and Thomas Walker, etc.

Col. Nicholas^5 Meriwether, married Margaret Douglass; he was brave in danger, self-possessed in the most difficult situations.

Mary[6] Meriwether, dr. of Francis[5] Meriwether, married Capt. Wm. Barnett, an officer in the Revolutionary War, under Marquis de LaFayette. He was a first cousin of the distinguished statesman William H. Crawford. And also of Nathan Crawford Barnett, a venerable Secretary of State of Georgia, first elected 1843; then again in the years 1845-7-51-61-65-73-77-79-81-84. He served under 11 governors, George W. Crawford, George W. Townes, Howell Cobb, etc. In 1832 he was elected by the citizens of Clark Co., Ga., surveyor to assist in the survey of the Cherokee purchase, the same county elected him Major of his battalion, and afterwards Colonel of the Co. Regiment. (See Barnett sketch.)

Nicholas[1] Meriwether, born in Wales, or England, about 1631, married Elizabeth Woodhouse, and died about Dec. 19, 1678, probably in Virginia. They had at least five children, and perhaps more, we have reason to think there were seven. Whether he was the immigrant of the family or not, still causes some confusion in tracing the family records, and his son Nicholas is often spoken of as the immigrant; see Va. Mag. V. 34, p. 107. DESCENDANTS OF COL. DAVID³ MERIWETHER AND WIFE, ANNE HOLMES

The will of David³ Meriwether is recorded in Louisa County, Va., 1, 22, 1745; he was the original owner of the plantation, "Cloverfields", the first dwelling was built on it in 1760, by Col. Nicholas Meriwether, gr. gr. son of David Meriwether. This Nicholas was noted for his courage, and decisions, in times of danger. In 1755 he was one of four soldiers of the Virginia Regiment who bore the wounded General Braddock from the field, after his defeat, near Pittsburg. Col. Meriwether later received from the General's sister in Ireland, a gold laced embroidered military dress coat, which had belonged to the General and which was long preserved as a relic in the Meriwether family at Cloverfields, Albemarle Co., Va. Col. David³ Meriwether was buried on the east bank of the Rivanna River; he and his wife Anne (Holmes) Meriwether had issue;

Gilmer's Georgians gives Thomas Meriwether, as son of William, but the weight of evidence is in favor of the record above.

Francis^{5} Meriwether, (Thomas^{4}, David^{3}, Nicholas^{2}, Nicholas^{1}) born 10, 31, 1737; Louisa County, Va., died in Georgia; Broad River settlement, 1785. He was called Frank and was the second son of Thomas Meriwether, and Elizabeth Thornton. He studied medicine, and intended to perfect his studies in Edinboro, Scotland, but the Revolutionary War prevented. He declined therefore to practice professionally, but gave up his entire time to doctoring, nursing and caring for the sick, and wounded, this being entirely gratis. *Within his circle of friends and acquaintances the opinion prevailed that he was the best man in the world.—Meriwether Gen.

Benjamin Taliaferro was a Capt. and rendered seven years service in the Continental Line of Va., (Va. Co. Recds.; Crozier, V. 6, pp. 33-52.) Removed soon after the war in 1784 to Georgia. Was often a member of the Legislature. Served as President of the Senate. Elected Judge of the Superior Court. Mem. of Congress. (See Ga., Land and People, by Mitchell, pp. 150-1-2. Tombstone Records. Fam. Letters, and Genealogical Tracings.)

Capt. Taliaferro moved to Georgia 1784, and became one of the leading men of the state.

Benjamin Taliaferro was present at the burning of the Yazoo Papers, 2, 15, 1796. He was also prominent in the Convention of Delegates, from twenty-one counties, which met in Louisville, May, 1798. This convention finally adopted the Constitution that lasted the State of Georgia for fifty years.

Virginia Hist. Reg. V. 1, p. 46.

Benjamin Taliaferro (1750-1821), m. Martha, dr. of David Meriwether, was a member of Constitutional Convention of Georgia, 1798; from Wilkes County, Ga., (Ga. and Ga. People—Smith; p. 179). Benjamin Taliaferro received land grants in Wilkes county, 1790 (p. 640).

Benjamin Taliaferro also served under Gen. Lee; was made prisoner at the capture of Charleston, S. C., 5, 12, 1780; was promoted to Captain. He was one of the original members of the order of Cincinnati. He was judge of the Superior Court of Georgia. Lived and died a respected citizen of the state, and quite wealthy. (Taliaferro Fam. in Campbell-Pilcher Fam. Bk.)

Capt. Benjamin Taliaferro, served in the Revolutionary Army in the rifle corps commanded by Gen'l Daniel Morgan, and participated in the battles of Saratogo. and Monmouth, and in the siege of Savannah. (Appleton's Biog. Cyclopedia.)

From Gilmer's Georgians we glean the following: "Gen. Benj. Taliaferro, served as Lieutenant in Revolutionary War in Virginia Regt., which was afterward placed upon the Continental establishment. He commanded a company under Gen. Washington during the severe siege in the Jerseys. 1777-8. At the battle of Princeton he. with his company, captured a British officer and his command. When the British officer stepped forward in his dashing regimentals to deliver up his sword, the proud barefooted Capt. Taliaferro ordered his Lieutenant to receive it. At the call of Gen Washington he volunteered to join the southern army, then under command of Gen. Lincoln." D. A. R. Lin. Bk. V. 36.

Capt. Benjamin^{8} Taliaferro. (Nicholas^{7}) in command of the 1st Co., recruited in Cleveland County, Ark. for the Confederate service. Organized 1861. It was attached to the 2nd Arkansas Infantry. (Ark. Hist. S. W. Goodspeed, p. 697.)

Woodhouse

Frank^5 Meriwether, settled in Oglethorpe County, Ga. with the Matthews, Marks, Gov. Gilmer's father and uncle, Micajah McGehee, John Thomas, Stuarts, Floyds, Howards, Popes and Hills. This county was organized 1793. The first court was held three miles from Lexington, 1794. See Ga., and Ga. People, by Smith; p. 201.

Elizabeth, wf. of Nicholas^2 Meriwether, on June 9, 1679; was granted administration papers on the estate of Lewis Williams, whose wife was said to have been Lucy—————?. Mrs. Meriwether was nee Elizabeth Crawford. Another record in Surry Co., Va., 11, 7, 1682, states that Lt.-Col. William Browne. married the administratrix of the estate of Lewis Williams. (See Va. Mag. V. 32, pp. 292-3.) If this is true the compiler has found no verification of the fact.

One of the most recently published records of the Meriwether family is "Genealogy of the Meriwether Family and connections," by George B. Wilds. This cites a royal lineage of the Meriwethers, through Elizabeth Thornton, wf. of Thos. Meriwether. From Edward 1st, Kg. of England, Phillip 3rd, King of France, and other illustrious persons.

Mr. Wilds is in error about the descendants of Elizabeth Thornton, who married Thomas Meriwether, tracing back through Washingtons, Reades, Martians, to the Royal personages named above. This compiler has worked unceasingly on the line for twenty-five years, and has never seen his claim verified. He claims that the Francis Thornton who married Francis Gregory, was the father of Elizabeth Thornton, who married Thomas Meriwether. This has been proven beyond a doubt, by many reliable genealogists, to be incorrect.

Elizabeth Thornton, who married Thomas Meriwether was the daughter of Francis Thornton, and Mary Taliaferro, they were of St. Mary's Parish, Caroline Co., Va. (Wm. and Mary Quarterly V. 4, pp. 157-8).

There is recorded in Orange Co., Va., a deed dated Nov. 1, 1737; from Francis Thornton, of St. Mary's Par. Caroline Co., Va. and Mary, his wife. And another dated May 21, 1738, from Francis Thornton, of St. Mary's Par., Caroline Co., Va., Gent. to his daughter Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Meriwether, Hanover Co., Va.

W. B. McGroarty, an authority on Thorntons, and Taliaferros, as well as on other family lines, says. "There is no question but what Mary Taliaferro was the wife of Col. Francis Thornton. They lived on adjoining plantations, in their youth, on Snow Creek, in Caroline Co., Va. That the wife of this particular Francis Thornton was Mary Taliaferro. I have never seen disputed", nor that they were the parents of Elizabeth Thornton, married Thomas Meriwether. (See Va. Mag. of History. V. 22.)

Francis Thornton, and Mary Taliaferro, had a son Francis^2 Thornton, who married Francis Gregory, cousin of Washington. And it is the descendants of Francis^2 Thornton. son of Francis Thornton, and Mary Taliaferro, through his wife Francis Gregory, that have the claim to the lines traced by Mr. Wilds. And not the descendants of Elizabeth Thornton, who married Thomas Meriwether.

Woodhouse Family—Eleanor Lexington.

"It may come under fiction, for it certainly gives one pause to find a "Sir Julius Caesar", figuring on a pedigree chart. Yet here he is and of right, among progenitors of a branch of the Woodhouse family."

It was Henry, s. of Capt. Henry Woodhouse, and born in Bermuda 1607; Henry, Jr., who at 30 years of age, established his home in Virginia. The line of descent, in annals of the family of this branch. starts with Sir Thomas Woodhouse, father of Capt. Henry. Sir Thomas was a son of Sir Thomas of Waxham, England, his father was plain John Woodhouse.

Of this branch was Sir Henry Woodhouse, who married Anne, dr. of Sir Nicholas Bacon, keeper of the great seal, in the reign of Elizabeth, and father of the illustrious Lord Bacon. We now have caught up with Sir Julius Caesar, as found on the pedigree chart of the Bacons."

Capt. Henry Woodhouse, father of Henry, founder of the family of Virginia, leased some land in Bermuda. (here his son was born 1607) for which the annual rental was 100 each of oranges, lemons and potatoes, to be paid at the Feast of the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary. The rent was later increased to 300 of the largest and best oranges, and 100 each of the best lemons and the best potatoes.

This old distinguished Virginia Family descended from the Woodhouse family of Waxham, Norfolk, England. John Woodhouse, of this place had a son 1. William, who married for his 2nd wf. Eliza, dr. of Sir Phillip Calthorpe, and widow of Sir Henry Parker; 2. Sir Henry, d. 1624; m. Ann, dr. of Sir Nicholas Bacon, the Lord Keeper, and a sister of Francis Bacon, 1st, Lord Verulom. Sir Henry Woodhouse was father of Capt. Henry Woodhouse, who was Governor of the Bermudas from Oct. 1623 to 1, 13, 1626-7. (and married Judith; had Elizabeth; m. Nicholas Meriwether.) Va. Will of Sir Henry Woodhouse, Waxham, in County, Norfolk, Knight—Dated 18th Sept. 1624. Admon 4th Feb. 1624-5. Mentions Nicholas Bacon, of Red grave, in County Suffolk, Esqr. Knight Baronet. It also speaks of Dame Cecile Woodhouse, Executrix, (his wife), Va. Mag. Hist. and Biog. V. 28, p. 40.

The Sir Henry Woodhouse whose will is given above, was the father of Sir William Woodhouse, and of Captain Henry Woodhouse, Governor of Bermudas, (and grandfather of Elizabeth Woodhouse who married Nicholas Meriwether). See Va. Mag. Hist. and Biog. V. 28, p. 40.

Sir Henry Woodhouse's second wife, and widow was Cecile————; he is said to have married 1st, Ann, daughter of Nicholas Bacon; see Royal Chart of the Meriwethers, Atlanta Sunday American.

In 1665 Nicholas Meriwether, b. 1631, is mentioned as administrator of Thomas Woodhouse. On this, W. R. Griffith, author of one of the Meriwether genealogies, based his conclusion that the wife of our first Nicholas Meriwether, Elizabeth Woodhouse, was also a resident of Surry Co., Va., and of James City County; and that she was the daughter of Thomas Woodhouse. (See p. 60, V. 12, Wm. and Mary Quart.) p. 63. same volume.

Further tracings will show that this is an error and that she was daughter of Capt. Henry Woodhouse. (See chart this volume.)

*Thomas MackGehee, Maj. in Army; s. of James MacGregor, g. s. of Patrick MacGregor, of Scotland, immigrated to Va., and changed his name to MackGehee, because his father's clan was outlawed in the old country, for political reasons. Patrick MacGregor supported the royal cause 1644-5; under Montrose. His adherence to King Charles I, resulted in his being outlawed. It was wise for him and his family to leave Scotland. Their name MacGregor was taken away from them.

Patrick MacGregor married Lady Marian MacDonald. Their son James was an officer in the Scottish army. Removed to Virginia. Locating in King William County; and it was he, it is said, who took the name MackGehee. Some authorities are inclined to the belief that the name James MacGregor selected when he first arrived was William MacGehee, and he had a son Thomas MackGehee, whose will contained the names of the children listed above.

Calloway and part of McGehee Notes contributed by Mrs. A. C. Renfrow, of Rison, Ark.

From Mrs. Renfrow; "I think that George and Anderson Tate who are buried near Tate's Bluff, on the Ouachita river, in Ouachita County, Ark., were the brothers of my great grandmother Nancy Tate, who married Samuel McGehee. They were soldiers of the Revolution."

Colonel William Calloway, 1st County Lt. for Bedford County, Va. When Campbell County was formed he gave the 100 acres on which New London Town was built. He had three sons; James, who was quite prominent in Bedford, and Campbell Co's. 2. Richard; 3. Charles. Either James or Charles was the father of Job Calloway, who m. Rebecca Vining. They had nine children; one of whom was Jeptha, who married Mary McGehee. See elsewhere.

* Mary Elizabeth Blackwell, 1st wife of Major Samuel M. McGehee, was naturally timid and of exceeding temerity; she overcame that during the Civil War sufficiently to perform a very heroic deed. In Sept., 1863, the Federal troops occupied the portion of Arkansas near Little Rock, and their lines extended fifteen miles west of where she and her children were. By close observation she became aware of the activities of the Federal forces. Quietly and unobtrusively she saddled her horse, an old blind grey, the only one left to her, and with her nine year-old son behind her rode fifteen miles out to a picket. She inquired if Capt. Scruggs were on duty, when informed that he was, she sent in her name and was soon in his presence. She informed him the Federals were making important moves south, that a train of 35,000 troops, 115 wagons, and several pieces of Artillery had just left Pine Bluff. This intelligence he communicated to one of the Confederate forces, and a move was begun to intercept them. The Federals were surprised, and 20,000 men, and all of their transportations were captured. Mrs. McGehee returned home before day, having ridden thirty miles at night, on an errand frought with the greatest dangers. This was told to a member of the family, by her husband Major McGehee.

Royal Lineages—E. S. Lewis, Mss, in St. Louis, Public Liby.
Courtenay—Barons Courtenay, Earls of Devon.

Courtenay—The Courtenay family was one of the most illustrious, and aristocratic in ancient France, and England. It can be traced to as remote a date as 1020, when the family seems to have been established in the Isle of France. Of the English nobility none is more illustrious than the Courtenays.

The Earls of Devonshire had as one ancestor, Sir Reginald de Courtenay, 1194, father of Hugh Courtenay, married Hawise Abrincis, time of Henry II, of England, and from Sir Reginald the Irish branch trace their descent.

The Courtenays of British nobility, deduced their pedigree paternally from Athon, who himself descended from Pharamond, founder in 420; of the French monarchy, and common patriarch of all the Kings of France. This Athon having fortified, during the reign of Robert the Wise, the town of Courtenay, in the Isle of France, thence adopted his sirname. But the power of the Courtenays in England principally arose from the great alliances formed by the first members of the family who settled there.

Courtenays and Hastings are noble names unsurpassed in the whole range of European genealogy, having at all times exercised a powerful influence on the political events of their country. These names of British nobility still endure in all their original grandeur. See p. 347.

Arms—Or, three torteaux, with a label of three pints, az in chief, p. 142; Or, three torteaux, is the original de Courtenay Coat of Armor, Henry VIII, granted an augmentation, a bordure, with the Lions of England, the Lilies of France. The blazon of the Coat of Arms, illustrated is; Or, three torteaux.

Crest; Out of a ducal coronet, or a plume of seven ostrich feathers, argent. Motto; Quad Verum Tutum—What is true is safe.

Henry de Grey*, in the sixth year of King Richard I, that monarch conferred the manor of Thurrock County, Essex, afterwards called Thurrock Grey, upon Henry de Grey, which grant was confirmed by King John, who vouchsafed, by special charter, to permit Henry de Grey to hunt hare, and fox, in any land belonging to the crown, save the King's own demesne part. In the first of Henry III, he had also a grant of the manor of Grimston, Co., Nottingham, and after marrying Isolda Bardolf, the heiress, he shared in the Bardolf lands. She was the daughter of William Bardolf, Jr.

Richard de Grey, of Codnor Co., Derby, the oldest son, having adhered to King John, had the lands of John Humez, in Leicestershire, and Simon de Canci, in Lincolnshire, two of the rebellious Barons, conferred upon him; and in the 10th of Henry III, he was made Governor of the Isles of Guernsey, Jersey, Aldernay, and Sarke; in the 36th of the same King he had a grant in fee form for 400 marks, to be paid yearly into the King's exchequer. MAGNA CHARTA BARONS

The Magna Charta signed, and sealed by King John, July 15, 1215; on the famous meadow called Runnemede. The first charter of King John was given 11, 21, 1214. Witnesses, those of direct interest to the descendants of Marks, Barnetts, and other families included in this book, will follow.

The great nobles of the Kingdom were unequally divided, and many remained loyal to King John until his death. Among the most prominent was William, the lord le Mareschal, of the King's House, who was created Earl of Pembroke by King John. Other regal sympathizers were William, Baron Ferrers, E. of Derby, William, Baron de Redvers, Earl of Devon, but too old to serve, Baron De Vere, Earl of Oxford, Robert DeVere, Surety for Magna Charta.

The Magna Charta Barons were only "Barons by tenure", under the feudal laws then prevailing, though they were accounted peers of the realm, and styled Barons, etc., they were the owners of Fortresses, or castles, and Lordships, and manors, and were the heads of families.

Knights of the Garter—Through Bernard, Barnetts, Marks and other families in this book.

The founders of the most noble Order of the "Knights of the Garter", were all soldiers, who had taken part in the glories of the war, between Edward III, and France, and who fought in the battle of Creecy, which has gone down in history as one of the world's most famous battles. In olden times the Garter was conferred as a chief reward for military merit. The Order of the Garter, in August, 1348, had an installation, which was held by King Edward III, and the Garter members were, beside the King, (partial list), Sir Thomas de Beauchamp, 3rd, Earl of Warwick, Lord of Wigmore, Ralph, Lord Stafford, Robert Mortimer, Earl of Marche, John Mohun, Lord Mohun, of Dunster, Sir Hugh de Courtenay, John de Grey, Lord of Rotherfield, one of the founders of Knights of the Garter. Sir Brian Stapleton, sire, Sir Miles Stapleton, son; Henry de Bohun, Ralph de Stafford, 2nd Baron, a person of celebrity in wars of Edward III. Sir Hugh de Stafford, Sir Ralph de Neville, (son) Sir John Neville (father) 3rd Baron, of Raby.

The Queens, and the wives, and widows of the Knights were permitted by the King to wear the habit of the Order of the Garter at St. George's Day, each wearing a Garter on her left arm similar to that of the Knight. She was then considered as a member of the Order. Partial list.

Earls of Mercia;

Leofric, E. of Mercia, d. at Bromley, Staffordshire, 8, 31, 1057; a powerful man, and "himself without stain". Algar*, his son held his father's earldom of Mercia (Marcia) until his death. Leofric married Lady Godiva, or Godgifu, of whom the tale is told in Poetry by Tennyson, rode through the streets of her town, clothed only in her magnificent suit of hair, which almost completely covered her form. She was a chaste and beautiful woman, and performed this remarkable deed only upon the condition that a certain tax, which oppressed the people of Coventry, should be remitted. She was loved by the people. And when she gave orders that all windows and doors be tightly closed, they gladly did her bidding. And she rode through the town, delivered the people from the oppression, unseen by any save a simple boy, "Peepin Tom", who according to the legend was struck blind. (Legendary History). The Lineage is Historically correct. (See Barnett chart, No. 115.)

As you will note we are descended from more than a score of Crusaders, some of whom died in Palestine fighting for the Holy Sepulchre. And Kings and Queens innumerable. The Royal lines English, Scotch, Welsh, Irish, Italian, French, German, Russian, Norman, and those of Parthia and Armenia.

Roman Empires, Hungarian, Frank, Visogoth, Saxon, and early lineages are recorded here.

Mrs. Lora La Mance, author of the valuable Greene Family book, has traced a vast amount of old world ancestry, which she has given to the history of today. One writer speaks of titled lines as the "Royal leakages," be that as it may, the foregoing are ours, and it is fascinating to trace our lineages to see from whom we sprang. (Compiler.)

Atlanta Sunday American. Gen. Col. Genealogy, by Mrs. E. A. Whittaker, 3, 6, 1932.

There seems more than one version of the Woodhouse lineage—and the following does not coincide with the above, although both have been approved by several genealogical associations.

Capt. Henry Woodhouse (30) was son of Thomas Woodhouse, Sir, of Waxham, or Warham, Eng., gr. son of John Woodhouse, and his wf. Alice Croft. Capt. Henry Woodhouse was in the expedition Isle of Rhi, and Rochelle, was recommended to be Captain of Telbury Fort. He was master of the "suster" (illegible) of Suffolk Co., England, 1623-26. Gov. of Bermudas, and there was present at a Council Table Mar. 1, 1626. A few years later he petitioned King Charles to give him the Governorship of Virginia, a position the King had promised him, but he did not get it. His son Henry Woodhouse, b. in Bermudas immigrated to Virginia when thirty years old, and was a member of House of Burgesses 1647-1652; from Lower Norfolk, Va., and Commissioner of the County. He was also a member of vestry of the old church at Lynhaven, Va. He died 1655; leaving a wife, Mary——————, four sons and several daughters, viz.; Henry, Horatio, John, William. Elizabeth, m. Nicholas^1 Meriwether, Sarah, Mary, Rachel.

Other version;

Captain Henry Woodhouse, Governor of Bermudas. 1623-6-7; m. Judith—was son of Sir Thomas Woodhouse of Waxham, England, son of John Woodhouse of England.

Cooke Arms, D. A. R. Mag. Aug. 1920, p. 469.

"Sir Anthony Cooke, grandfather of Lord Bacon, was so distinguished for his learning that he was appointed to preside over the education of Edward VI." Same reference.

Charlemagne^1, Louis I^2, Charles II^3, Martel, Judith^4, married 1st, Aethelwulf; he by a former marriage was the father of Alfred the Great, whose daughter Aelfthryth, m. Baldwin II, who was Judith's son by her third husband Baldwin I.

Judith m. 2nd,? Aethelbald, her stepson, being the son of Aethelwulf, by a former marriage. It is not known whether or not he was the brother of Alfred the Great.

The above has been verified by Virginia Society Colonial Dames of America. Paper of Miss Mary Timberlake, Jackson, Tenn.

BALDWIN;

Baldwin in early Norman French, was a designative term meaning Chief—Keeper of the Royal Staghounds. Other authorities give the meaning of Baldwin as "bold in battle."

One of the best known royal Bandouvins or Baldwins in 862; he then being the hereditary chief-forester of Harlebeck, in Flanders, was created Count of Flanders, and later Count of Artois by his father-in-law Charles le Hardi. King of the Franks to whose daughter Judith he was 3rd husband. This Baldwin I, Count of Flanders was the son of Odvacres, the son of Enguerand, (some give the spelling as Ingelramn, the son of Lyderick.

Their son Baldwin II, Count of Flanders, married Aelfthryth, daughter of Judith's stepson Alfred, who was the son of Judith's first husband Aethelwulf, by a former marriage. Aethelwulf was the father of Alfred the Great, by his wife Osburga, and through the marriage of Baldwin II, and Aelfthryth, the English Kings, since the Conqueror trace their descendants from Alfred the Great, and Charlemagne. And also through this Judith to the Guelphs.

The grandson of Judith, and Baldwin I, Count of Flanders followed the Crusades, and inherited the throne of Jerusalem.

After studying early European History, which gives sordid details of the lives and habits, of the rulers of that day, and their knights, and retinue, it makes us anything but proud of our claim on them as progenitors. Those of us who so proudly acclaim our royal ancestry have many skeletons in our closets, and in compiling this volume, when charts are given, and lines traced it is with no idea of snobbery, or vain boast, but merely as a matter of record, of interest, a completion of family lines, and the bringing of history down to date. Mrs. C. W. Pettigrew, nee Marion Louise Dewoody, dr. of the late Wm. Lawrence Dewoody, and wife Mary (Sorrells) Dewoody, of Pine Bluff, Ark. Ed. in the schools of Pine Bluff, and Hamilton College, Lexington, Ky., m. Clarence W. Pettigrew, Pine Bluff, Ark., Nov. 17, 1903. Mrs. Pettigrew is a Presbyterian, democrat, club woman, business woman, and well known genealogist of national, and international recognition. A charter member of the Pine Bluff Chapter D. A. R., has filled every office in the Chapter, serving nineteen years as Registrar, which office she is still holding, 1938. Also serving eight years as State Registrar. Chapter Regent, 1918-20. Has served on state and national committees of genealogical research.

While serving her chapter as Secretary, during her mother's term of Regency, Mrs. Pettigrew originated the plan of having the Pine Bluff, Chapter D. A. R., present a Stand of Colors to the Battleship Arkansas. Acting as Chairman of the Committee that consummated the plan. The Stand consisted of three very handsome Flags, viz.; American, Naval Battalion, and the State Flag of Arkansas. These were each seven feet long, hand embroidered on best quality silk, made by M. C. Lily Co. Philadelphia, at a cost of $650.00. To Mrs. Pettigrew belongs the honor of having been the chief instigator of the organization of the Public Library Association, and for twenty years served as president. For her years of service without remuneration, that resulted in a magnificent new library building, and equipment, and over 50,000 books, she received many and signal honors.

In compiling Anderson, Crawford, and Meriwether families, much of which is contained in other volumes has been quoted in this volume. But this was deemed necessary, to give a working basis for the future generations, whose ancestry has been included in this book, and not in those previously published. Compiler.

She served as vice-president of the Arkansas Library Assoc. during the term of Gov. C. H. Brough, as state president. She served four years as president of her literary club, and was appointed on the National Board of Library War council, by President Woodrow Wilson. Nominated for the citizenship cup, 1929, given by the Pine Bluff Commercial for outstanding Civic work. Received City Federation's personal award, and had her name inscribed, and her portrait placed in the Federation's Golden Book, for outstanding Club service, 1930.
